Two Waves of British Planes Bomb Berlin

Five Killed, Score Hurt In District Area Traffic

Crash on Route 260 Costs D.C.Man's Life; Blowout on Landover Road Fatal to Woman

Traffic accidents yesterday took five lives and caused injury to more than a score of persons in Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

The dead:

Amy Isabel Dearstine, 29, of Bladensburg, Md.

Melvin Anderson, 28, of 2500 Foxhall road, northwest.

Freak Street Car Crash

A freak automobile-street car accident in the 5800 block of Georgia avenue northwest critically injured John E. White, sr., 63, of 3115 Mount Pleasant street northwest.

A trolley operated by Hubert J. Hook, 38, of 216 Farragut street northwest, struck White's car as he made a U-turn. He was thrown from the automobile into the path of the street car as the machine, driverless, continued the turn. The street car then struck White as his auto completed a full circle and struck the trolley. White was taken to Garfield Hospital with head and internal injuries.

Shumaker, police said, left Washington at 11:30 p. m. Saturday to visit his father, Ernest Shumaker, at Chesapeake Beach, Md. The accident occurred about 1:30 a. m. when the car left the road and crashed into an embankment at Owings Station and Route 260.

Companion Gravely Hurt

With Shumaker in the convertible coupe was William C. Greer, 21, of 521 Seventeenth street southeast. He was taken to Casualty Hospital for treatment of a broken leg and head injuries. His condition was described as serious.

Miss Dearstine was riding in an automobile driven by Lawrence E. Cook, of Lima, Md. A tire blew out near Glen Arden road and Landover road and the car turned over several times, police reported. Miss Dearstine was killed instantly. Cook was taken to Casualty Hospital for treatment of a brain concussion. Lucille Nevel, 21, was taken to the same hospital, where her condition was said to be good.

Low of 58 Degrees Marks Coldest Aug. 25 in 13 Years

A low temperature of 58 yesterday gave Washington its coldest August 25 in 13 years. Continued cool and rain was forecast for this morning.

Rain that began in the afternoon postponed the National Symphony Concert at the Watergate until 8 p. m. today. Yesterday's high was 65 at 2:15 p. m. The reading of 58 was at 5:30 p. m.

A low recording of 51.7 degrees brought New York City its coldest August 25 on record, while Binghamton, N. Y., reported 37. The cold belt extended east from the Great Lakes across New England.

What Conscription Means to You

Skilled Workers Least Likely to Be Called

(Editor's Note: With conscription a probability, The Post is presenting a series designed to answer everyone's questions about the effect of the draft on him. The series is based on pending legislation and the plans drawn up by selective service specialists since the World War. Questions are invited.)

Gaining momentum steadily after Registration Day, America's conscription machinery will move into high gear when its largest cog—the "classification" system—shifts into operation.

But like most heavy machinery, the ponderous selective service apparatus must overcome considerable inertia before it reaches top-speed production.

According to the carefully timed scheduled of the Joint Army-Navy Selection Board, two weeks will be required to set up the personnel units necessary for registration. On the nineteenth day after passage of the bill the local selection (classification) boards will be ready to function.

And on the twenty-first day will be held the lottery to determine which registrants will receive the first installment of classification questionnaires.

Classification is the refining stage in conscription. It is the process whereby 4,500,000 men will be picked from the approximately 12,000,000 registrants by the elimination of those who are for any reason unavailable for service.

(These figures are based on the Senate bill as it now stands. The House has tentatively approved legislation calling for immediate registration of all men from 18 to 64, inclusive, with those from 21 to 45, inclusive, subject to call for active duty.)

In general, men will be deferred if they are physically unfit, have one or more dependents, have jobs in vital defense industries, or are in miscellaneous categories, including clergymen,

Commissioners Open Budget HearingsToday

46 D. C. Groups Ask To Be Heard During Two-Day Sessions

Confronted by budgetary estimates exceeding anticipated revenues by some $10,000,000, the District Commissioners today and tomorrow for the first time will have responsibility of erecting Washington's budget structure.

Public hearings start at 10 a. m., on both days, in the board room of the District Building. Forty-six organizations have asked to be heard on the budget for 1942.

In determining the 1942 setup, the Commissioners will take into consideration the possibility of a $3 real estate tax. This is expected to confront local property holders should the Commissioners approve a $62,907,225 budget, as submitted for next year by department heads.

Such a raise is considered by officials as the only method to finance the increase without new Congressional tax legislation. Both District and civic officials regard the current $1.75 tax as the "ceiling."

Estimated revenues for the next fiscal year will be about $50,000,000. The Commissioners have been given wide discretion over the city's budget by the Federal Budget Bureau, but that agency still will review the budget with a view to its being balanced, and with regard to strictly Federal requirements.

Among requests are a school budget of $18,346,369, which would bring nine new schools, more than 250 additional employes and develop plans for a new Wilson Teachers College. This amount is a 43 per cent increase over the amount appropriated for the current year.

Willkie Spurns McNutt's Offer For Debate

Forum Suggestions Of New Dealers 'Amusing,' He Says

By William B. Ardery
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Aug. 25.—Wendell L. Willkie said today it "would be a pure loss of time" for him to debate campaign issues with Paul V. McNutt, his college classmate and fraternity brother who now holds a high Administration post.

McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, had offered to meet Willkie in platform argument. In a statement, the latter replied:

"Paul is a persistent fellow who is trying to keep in the picture after a rather rough and forced exit at the Chicago New Deal convention. It is a little tough going for him, but he is still a likeable chap."

(McNutt, bowing to the President's wishes, withdrew as a contender for the Democratic Vice Presidential nomination and supported Henry A. Wallace.

Willkie asserted that "these debate suggestions of New Dealers are quite amusing," and added:

"It is particularly interesting that the President refuses to debate because he is too busy, while having ample time to make purely 'non-political' dedicatory addresses. Perhaps (Secretary of Interior) Ickes assigned the real cause for the refusal, namely, it would lessen the Presidential dignity."

Willkie and McNutt both belonged to Beta Theta Pi while attending Indiana University. They once appeared together on a speaking program at a fraternity reunion.

A statement from Willkie headquarters said that the nominee had talked by telephone with Kenneth

Roads for Defense

Superhighways Planned to Link D. C. to Baltimore, Annapolis

Plans for new multiple-lane, land-divided highways between Washington and Baltimore and Washington and Annapolis were announced yesterday by Gov. O'Conor, of Maryland.

The roads would be constructed as part of a State highway-building program proposed by the Federal Public Roads Administration in the interests of national defense, O'Conor said. The program would cost between $50,000,000 and $75,000,000, it was estimated.

In a statement issued to the Associated Press at Annapolis, O'Conor said that no "definite indication" had been given as to how the vast program would be financed, but he added:

"It is expected that the necessary Federal aid will be forthcoming from the authorization bill now being considered."

Public Roads Administration officials here, however, denied knowledge of any pending appropriation bill that would provide so huge a sum for Maryland road improvement.

The biennial PRA appropriation (HR 9375), which is now in conference, would provide only $125,000,000 a year for Federal aid to all the States. Maryland's share of this sum would be "much less" than $5,000,000, one official said.

He added, however, that conferences have been held in recent weeks among officials of the Public Roads Administration, the War De-

Roosevelt Acts To Spend Millions For Training Cantonments

By Frank L. Kluckholm
Copyright by New York Times

President Roosevelt has authorized the appropriation of a considerable sum of money, reputedly close to $25,000,000, for construction of water, drainage and utility services preparatory to construction of cantonments for the 400,000 men, in addition to the National Guard and expanding Regular Army, whom it is planned to induct into military service by January 1.

This was revealed in authoritative War Department circles yesterday, where it was said that the sum allocated came from the $200,000,000 fund put under the President's personal control in the first special appropriation for the Army and Navy voted by Congress this session.

Acts to Offset Delay

The President acted as the Senate's delay in dealing finally with the Burke-Wadsworth selective service bill threatened to postpone any conscription until spring "under normal circumstances" because of the shortage of housing for large additions of men.

Since it takes longer to construct facilities for new cantonments than it does to construct the wooden barracks themselves, the President's action represents an attempt to forestall delay in inducting men into service insofar as it lays within the executive power to do so.

Men are already at work with these special Presidential funds carrying on construction work, Army staff men said. If Congress acts promptly upon selective service, they are hopeful of winning a race against time and weather and of having sufficient actual barracks built before winter sets in to take care of the men inducted.

Executives say they would not be surprised if the opposition to selective service in the Senate attempts to make some capital out of the President's action, but they note that this step is not only legal but represents a bold attempt to meet what they are convinced is a dangerous situation.

Fan Falls Dead As Indians Rally In Nats' Game

Frank W. Davis, 63, an iron worker, of 324 Todd place northeast, died of a heart attack yesterday at Griffith Stadium in the seventh inning of the baseball game when the Cleveland Indians had loaded the bases.

Mr. Davis collapsed in an upper deck box behind home plate at 4:40 p. m. He was carried to the first aid room, where he was pronounced dead 10 minutes later by Dr. Edward Larkin, the ball park physician.

His wife, Mrs. Eva H. Davis, was informed of his death by telephone at her home.

Mr. Davis was employed on construction at the Municipal Center at the time of his death. He was a member of Local No. 5, of the Iron Workers Union.

Mr. Davis was born in Wisconsin and lived in North Dakota before coming to Washington 11 years ago. Surviving, besides his wife, are a son, George E. Davis, of Cleveland, Ohio, and three grandchildren.

Burial service is planned in Hamilton, Ohio.

Rumanians, Magyars Edge Closer to War

Reported Movement Of Bucharest Troops Arouses Hungary

By the Associated Press

Judapest, Aug. 25. — Hungary called up thousands of additional reservists, ordered air raid precautions and took other defense measures today following reports that Rumania was sending reinforcements to Transylvania.

The intensification of military activity came as the Hungarian delegation arrived home from Turnu-Severin, where negotiations with Rumania over Hungarian claims to Transylvania collapsed yesterday.

Hungary's defense preparations in the past 24 hours included continuation of the calling of reservists which began Friday night, requisitioning of thousands of automobiles, screening street lights with blue anti-air raid filters, assembling special firefighting apparatus and whitewashing curbs for possible blackout.

No explanation of the defense measures was given but the government press asserted that Rumania was not acting in accord with the will of the Rome-Berlin Axis—which ordered the negotiations—and that Hungary would stand firm on her demands for the province lost to Rumania in the World War settlement.

Reports circulated meanwhile here and in Bucharest that the negotiations might be resumed some time this week, possibly in Hungary. Official Hungarian circles said Berlin and Rome were bringing strong pressure on Rumania to make concessions to the Budapest government.

Germans Reappear After Lull, Dropping Parachute Flares On British Capital

By the Associated Press

London (Monday), Aug. 26.—Screaming bombs were heard dropping on the London area early today as the fifth air raid alarm in three days—the second since sundown Sunday—roused Londoners from their beds.

The German raiders apparently failed in both attempts to penetrate the defenses of Metropolitan London, and neither attack approached the violence of those of Saturday night and Sunday morning, when several fires were started in the heart of this empire capital by incendiary bombs.

Flares dropped in one district by a German bomber lit up a wide area of blacked-out London. A raider in another district dropped parachute flares and then unloaded a number of bombs.

Flee Antiaircraft Fire

The German raiders departed quickly under heavy antiaircraft fire.

One raider which dropped three scream bombs in the London area was reported shot down. A high explosive bomb tore a great crater in a road and blew out the front of a tobacco shop and shattered windows in a wide radius.

Through the dark hours, other German raiders kept up attacks on widespread parts of England. The northeast area was struck intensively by waves of bombers, three or four in each flight. Violent explosions were heard and there was heavy gunfire from the ground.

In a midland town planes were heard overhead as well as the thud of bombs dropping some miles away.

The German Luftwaffe returned to the attack despite the loss, as claimed by the British, of 104 Nazi planes over the week-end—54 on Sunday and 50 on Saturday—in raids on this country.

300 Felled in 8 Days

During the past eight days, the British claim, nearly 300 German planes have been shot down over and around the British Isles and 1,175 have been brought down since the start of the war.

This total includes 1,101 aircraft which the British say have been lost by the Luftwaffe since it started its regular air raids off Britain June 18.

More than 800 German planes have been reported destroyed since mass raids began August 8.

An official account of Sunday's raids said that "one in every four of the enemy was shot down in the course of air attacks which were launched in the late afternoon of yesterday against our shores."

34 Shot Down at Dorset

The Ministry of Information said: "About 130 enemy aircraft approached the Dorset coast. Of these 34 were destroyed and many others received heavy punishment.

"The bulk of the enemy's formation was turned back during this attack before it could reach its objectives, which appeared to be inland from the coast.

"Another attack was directed against the southeast coast. Reports received up to 9 p. m. show that in

After Two Weeks of Blitzkrieg

Britain's Defenses Intact, Tour of Big Bases Indicates

By James B. Reston.

A Southeast England Port, Aug. 25.—An unescorted tour of the air and naval bases in south and southeast England convinced this correspondent that the mass German air raids of the past two weeks have not crippled the defenses of Britain.

It is true that German dive-bombers had considerable success in their raid on the buildings at Manston airfield, but they have not succeeded in keeping British fighter planes grounded, and every airfield in this area is still operating with what appeared to be its full complement of planes.

At one airport where the Germans obviously concentrated their attacks, hundreds of bombs have been dropped. While this correspondent was there an entire squadron of Spitfires took off to meet a flight of German bombers crossing the Channel.

At the same time the main naval establishments in this area seemed to have stood off repeated day and night attacks. Protected by their balloon barrages and land defenses, supported by the guns of warships, these bases forced the German raiders so high that the bombing in general appears to have been pretty poor.

The writer went through Portsmouth Naval Yard before the blitz-

London, Aug. 25.—Royal Air Force fliers Saturday night bombed war factories in Italy and Germany, and a score of Nazi air bases in France, Belgium, Holland and Germany, the air ministry announced today.

The British public, meanwhile is anxiously awaiting tomorrow's air ministry communique to see whether reprisals for the attacks on London have been taken against Berlin. Authorities would make no comment on reports that such reprisals had already been started.

There has been considerable clamor for reprisals, but the Times states that although "our bombers could doubtless cause a great deal of trouble for Berlin . . . a more certain way of injuring the enemy is

Roosevelt Back From Cruise, Faces Cabinet Vacancies

President Roosevelt returned last night from a week-end fishing cruise in Chesapeake Bay to face the problems of filling two Cabinet vacancies and mapping further third-term campaign strategy.

He will remain in the Capital only two days, however, before journeying to Hyde Park.

One of the Cabinet vacancies may already have been filled. That depends on whether Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones decides to accept Mr. Roosevelt's offer of appointment as successor to Harry L. Hopkins as Secretary of Commerce. Jones, however, was vacationing at Harbor Springs, Mich., last night, and apparently had not reached a decision.

Meanwhile, close friends of former Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson said Johnson had decided to reject the offer of the post of Undersecretary of Commerce, left vacant when Edward J. Noble resigned recently to play a more active political role in his home State of Connecticut.

Raiders Seen Over Wilhelmstrasse; Hitler Out of Town As Air Battles Rage

By the United Press

Berlin (Monday), Aug. 26.—British bombers attacked Berlin in two waves early today, zooming over Adolf Hitler's new chancellory and other government buildings in the heart of the capital while antiaircraft guns blazed furiously and heavy bomb explosions echoed through the streets.

The British raiders, in their first real attack on Berlin since the start of the war, swept through a barrage that appeared to have brought every antiaircraft gun in Berlin into action in ear-splitting fury.

Guns along Unter den Linden and atop ministries in the Wilhelmstrasse battled the attackers as they swept out of the overcast night with such a din that any noise of falling bombs was lost when the attack and counterattack reached its pitch.

Unter den Linden Blasted

A series of heavy explosions attributed to high-explosive bombs rumbled through the broad lane of Unter den Linden—Berlin's Fifth avenue—from the north, east and fashionable West End.

Police and propaganda officials said early today, however, that they could not issue any statement as to the extent of the attack or bomb damage.

So far the British were said to have dropped a single incendiary bomb on a nursery at Rosenthal, a north Berlin suburb, at 1:40 a. m. The damage was said to have been small.

It was added that British planes dropped leaflets in some sections of the capital.

The attack lasted 2 hours and 48 minutes, until 3:21 a. m., when the "all clear" signal finally was sounded.

It began at 12:35 a. m., drawing steadily nearer to the heart of the city until 1:10 a. m. Two planes swept upon the Wilhelmstrasse and the antiaircraft fire became terrific, with guns belching shells from the main business section.

Second Attack Heaviest

After an hour and 40 minutes the attack seemed over and at 2:15 a. m. the antiaircraft guns in central Berlin went silent.

But at 2:40 a. m. the heaviest antiaircraft fire of all suddenly broke upon the city and two or more planes appeared in the murky night over the Wilhelmstrasse.

Searchlight beams poked frantically at the sky to pick them out and provide a silhouetted target for the gunners, but the British fliers eluded the criss-crossing shafts of light.

At times the central streets were lighted by the glare of antiaircraft flashes.

Tracer Fire Slashes Sky

In the second attack, either by a new wave of British planes or another visit by planes previously driven off, the drone of airplane motors came like the bumble of a giant bee from the darkness overhead.

The motors appeared to hang over Berlin for some time, then faded away to the southwest. There was the almost constant noise of antiaircraft fire north and west of Berlin, while tracer fire slashed the sky on several sides.

In the early stages of the attack at least ten loud explosions, believed to be heavy bombs, rumbled across the city, some of them from beyond the west end.

At 2 a. m., as church bells tolled the hour over a suddenly "deserted" city, with men, women and

OF THEE I SING, BABY.

REGULAR FELLAHS: Wendell Willkie has a pet phrase which crops up often in his conversation. The phrase is "reg'lar fellah." He uses it freely on men he's talking to; the intimation is that "we're regular fellahs, but people who don't agree with us are not regular fellahs."

Harlan Miller

PHRASE OF THE MONTH: Ickes has atoned for the putrid poetry he used in his rough-and-tumble debate with Willkie last spring by coining the funniest phrase of the campaign thus far: "Willkie, the simple, barefoot Wall Street lawyer."

You can almost see Willkie wading in the watering trough at Wall and Broad.

WHITE MAN: Mr. Willkie has another phrase he uses occasionally in moments of emotional stress: "I'm a white man." Once, in reproaching a newspaperman for something he had written, Willkie said: "I'm a white man; you can't do that to me; I'm a white man."

* * * *

The GOP miracle man makes no bones about scolding newsmen who write things he doesn't like or regards as unfair. One man he has tackled already this summer is Tom Stokes, winner of the 1939 Pulitzer prize in journalism. Stokes took the rebuke with his customary nonchalance.

"—the pitchfork tradition"

ADOLF'S GAME: Overheard in the Senate dining room: "If Hitler could send Goebbels to Capitol Hill he'd have him working with might and main against American conscription. But the amateurs do it almost as well."

* * * *

Actually, the Senators opposing conscription aren't eager to help Hitler. They're merely enchanted by the deathless American superstition that in any great emergency some 4,000,000 Americans would leap into action with their pitchforks and toss the tanks off the roads like so much hay.

* * * *

AUTHOR, AUTHOR: During the Landon campaign, when it became known that he was delivering speeches written by others, I suggested it might be better if Landon wrote them and let some one else deliver them. This crack can't be taken at Willkie; he both writes and delivers.

* * * *

In fact, he is a proud, stubborn and jealous author, as unwilling to alter one word as a cub reporter. His acceptance was Willkie, all Willkie, nothing but Willkie. One trifling change he made was to eliminate a reference to the decline of Elwood, Indiana, after the natural gas ran out.

"They might quip you about that," someone warned. He scratched it.

"—sailing in both directions"

LOOP THE LOOP: The most perplexing passage in Willkie's speech—I have read it through seven times, to make sure—is the two consecutive sentences in which he seems to reverse himself like a tennis ball hitting a brick wall.

* * * *

The first one reads: "I am glad to pledge my wholehearted support to the President in whatever action he may take in accordance with these principles." (After quoting a long FDR sentence.)

The next sentence reads: "But I cannot follow the President in his conduct of foreign affairs in this critical time."

These two sentences are not entirely contradictory, but they seem so to a man who half heard the speech over the radio and who hasn't read it even once.

PRIZE CANDOR: Probably the sweetest tidbit in the speech is the Willkie foreign policy:

"In the foreign policy of the United States, as in its domestic policy, I would do everything to defend American democracy and I would refrain from doing anything that would injure it."

* * * *

This comes a litle before the sentence: "Candor in these times is the hope of democracy."

On this one he may have had the advice of a veteran amateur politician that it's valuable to support virtue and oppose sin.

* * * *

PLAYS HOOKEY: One day Mr. Willkie was going for a walk with Joe Martin and John Hamilton, of his brain trust . . . Some newsmen invited him to sit down for a cup of tea. He dismissed Joe and John and sat down . . . He sat there until his wife's scouts found him and reminded him that he was late for an appointment with some important callers.

Excess Profit Tax Approval Seen

House Leaders Predict Bill Will Pass This Week

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

House leaders last night forecast passage this week of the excess profits tax-plant amortization bill in response to President Roosevelt's prodding that its early enactment was necessary to remove one of the major obstacles encountered by the National Defense Advisory Commission in awarding aircraft and other equipment expansion contracts.

After a day of conferences at the Capitol, Chairman Robert L. Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, said he was "very hopeful" that the Ways and Means Committee would be able to bring out and press for House action on a satisfactory bill this week.

These forecasts of a break in the legislative log jam blocking the long pending defense measures came as Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, added his voice to demands, already expressed by influential Democrats, for facts, rather than "buck passing," as the reasons for the bogging down of the rearmament program.

"No Progress at All"

Senator Vandenberg asserted that the reasons for failure to get adequate results in air procurement "should be truthfully identified and cured," expressing agreement with the warning issued yesterday by Senator Harry F. Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, who suggested a Congressional investigation if an explanation was not forthcoming.

In the wake of the disclosure that, despite the millions appropriated for air force expansion, the United States actually had 80 fewer combat planes on June 30 than it had on January 1, Senator Vandenberg remarked that "orders for 343 combat planes in the last 100 days for all branches is no progress at all."

The Michigan Senator also indorsed the suggestion of Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, that the responsible executive and military heads of the Government be asked to "present all the facts" to the Senate in closed session, and also to give the legislative branch a "frank revelation of what our foreign policy now is, under various international commitments being made by the President."

He agreed with Majority Leader Barkley that "it is time to vote on conscription, one way or the other," and said that "if the tax bill is holding back armament contracts because new rules are necessary respecting amortization and depreciation, then these sections of the tax bill should be separated from the rest of the bill and promptly passed, as they probably could be in 48 hours."

In obvious agreement with Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican Presidential candidate, who yesterday proposed a new air defense cabinet post, the Senator also warned that "we shall never get the air force we want and need until the air force is an independent, consolidated, coordinated unit released from subordination to other units."

Representative Doughton, found at his office in a hopeful mood late today, appeared to disagree with Senator Vandenberg and others who have suggested separating the excess profits tax problem from other phases of the bill now under consideration.

He said flatly, in response to questions, that no separation was contemplated. He conceded that excess profits levies were the most difficult form of taxation to devise, but expressed confidence that an "equitable and good" formula would be approved and presented in a single measure which would provide for the five-year amortization of expenditures by industrialists for defense plant expansions and for suspension of the Vinson-Trammell act profit limitations on naval and aircraft contracts.

C. I. O. Terms Profit Limits Ineffective

Bill Now in House Would Raise Little Revenue, Says Survey

By the Associated Press

The C. I. O. contended yesterday that proposed tax legislation to limit profits on arms production would raise little revenue and would not be an effective "brake on excessive profits."

In its monthly survey, the Economic Outlook, the labor organization estimated that "only $30,000,000," and possibly less, would be raised under the excess profits tax bill now pending in the House Ways and Means Committee.

This, the survey said, involved an effective tax rate of about 3.5 per cent, whereas in 1918 "excess and war profits taxes had an effective rate of about 30 per cent."

New Formulae Asked

(The House Committee yesterday asked Treasury experts to devise new tax formulae, because of dissatisfaction with the present bill.)

"It has been the contention of the C. I. O.," the survey continued, "that industry has so far exacted excessive conditions from the Government for defense production."

The Outlook said that many large industrial corporations have refused to expand their facilities for manufacture of arms "until they were granted extensive tax concessions."

Two Basic Demands

Industry, the survey continued, made two "basic demands" upon the Government: (1) That costs of plant expansion could be amortized or written off in five years, and (2) that the Vinson-Trammell Act be suspended. This law limits profits on shipbuilding and airplane contracts to 7 and 8 per cent.

"The log-jam of national defense production arising out of the refusal to accept defense orders until the tax adjustments were made has been broken in part," the survey continued. "It has been broken by a device which is regarded in Washington as highly questionable. The National Defense Advisory Commission in letting contracts agreed that should tax changes satisfactory to the manufacturers not be made by Congress the manufacturers have the right to cancel the contracts and refuse to produce. This would give private industry the right to stop major national defense production on its own motion."

Willkie Spurns McNutt Debate

F. Simpson, former New York Republican committeeman who is recuperating from an illness in Nova Scotia.

Simpson Plans Visit

Simpson, ousted from his national committee position by the forces of Thomas E. Dewey, was a Willkie supporter at the Republican Convention in Philadelphia. Willkie headquarters said Simpson would visit the nominee after the latter returns Tuesday to his temporary headquarters in Rushville, Ind.

"During Mr. Simpson's visit," the statement said, "the New York political situation will be discussed fully."

Willkie will discuss political conditions in Western Pennsylvania at a luncheon tomorrow with former State Senator Frank J. Harris, of Pittsburgh.

The nominee spent most of the day in his hotel offices. He did some additional work on the speeches he will make during his Western campaign tour.

Without comment, Willkie issued a statement quoting President Roosevelt as having told the New York Republican - for - Roosevelt League on November 3, 1932:

"A great man (Woodrow Wilson) left a watchword that we can well repeat: 'There is no indispensable man.'"

McNary's Speech Of Acceptance Said to Be 'a Wow'

Salem, Oreg., Aug. 25 (INS).—Western republican leaders tonight privately conferred with Senator Charles L. McNary on his Vice Presidential nomination acceptance speech, to be delivered Tuesday, and emerged from the confab with broad smiles.

"It's just the kind of speech that one would expect from good old 'Charlie Mac.' It's sound and it's a wow," declared one G. O. P. leader, as he left McNary's 300-acre estate, Fir Cone, near the outskirts of Salem.

In the speech, McNary is expected to make a strong bid for the votes of the Western and the farm States by taking vigorous jabs at President Roosevelt and Henry Wallace on hydro-electric power power, forestry, farm problems and reciprocal trade agreements.

Political Arena

New York, Aug. 25 (AP).—Declaring that "misguided isolationists" do not reflect the true feeling of the American people,

SHERWOOD

Robert E. Sherwood, American playwright, urged today that the United States give increased "constructive help" to Canada and Britain in their war against Germany.

Sherwood, in a radio address, acclaimed recent establishment of a joint defense board by Canada and the United States as a step in the right direction, and asserted:

"This help must continue; it must be increased; it must provide the basis for permanent policy."

The vast majority of Americans, said Sherwood, believe that the future of their free institutions are at stake in the Battle of Britain.

The playwright referred to Henry Ford and Charles A. Lindbergh as typical of "misguided isolationists and think that the Atlantic and Pacific oceans are still just as broad as in the days of sailing vessels," and continued:

"We wish to tell the world that the voice of our country is not expressed by Lindbergh.

"The voice of our country is expressed truly and eloquently by President Roosevelt and by the other great American political leader, the Republican candidate for the Presidency, Wendell Willkie."

Senator Thomas Boosts Madden

Senator Thomas (Democrat) Utah, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, expressed the hope yesterday that President Roosevelt would reappoint J. Warren Madden as chairman of the National Labor Relations Board. Madden's 5-year term expires Tuesday.

There has been speculation that the chairman's post might be given to someone else. John G. Winant, director of the International Labor Office, has been mentioned recently as a possible choice.

Ickes Urges War Industries Development In Rocky Mountain and Far Western States

Present Concentration In East Held to Be Military Handicap

By the Associated Press

Secretary Ickes submitted to the National Defense Commission today a recommendation for development of major war industries in the Rocky Mountain States, California and the Pacific Northwest.

Drafted by Alvin J. Wirtz, Undersecretary of Interior, and Paul J. Raver, the Bonneville power administrator, it proposes that defense plants be built up as a corollary to a new power setup on the Columbia River. Output of Bonneville and of the Grand Coulee dams has been coordinated and could supply factories for the manufacture of aircraft, ordnance, munitions and ships.

"Most war industries of the Nation," they said, "are in the Northeastern States east of the Mississippi River, occupying 13 per cent of the land area of the country. In contrast, the 11 Western States, covering 40 per cent of the land area, do not have the industries either to protect the Pacific Coast and Pacific possessions or to supplement Eastern production for Atlantic Coast defense.

Training in 283 Cities

"These circumstances do not contribute to the speedy and most effective defense of the United States and its possessions."

Along with Ickes' recommendation, the Defense Commission received a report from Paul V. McNutt, Federal security administrator, that vocational summer schools had trained 20,000 men for defense jobs.

The training program was begun July 5, and, McNutt said, is being carried out in 283 cities.

"Pre-employment short courses giving instruction in specific skills, such as welding and riveting, now enroll 51,604 men," he told the commission. "Supplementary courses that aid workers on the job, who attend school to extend or improve their skills, have 29,010 registrants.

"Skills for which training is now being provided include: Blueprint reading, lathe work, milling, chipping and filing, parachute-making, toolmaking, auto mechanics, aviation mechanics, pattern making, drafting, electricity, radio, aviation sheet metal, foundry practice and machine shop practice."

Too Far to Transport

The Wirtz-Raver report noted that the Western States produced many minerals useful to the national defense.

Plants and products that they proposed for the West included:

A. For aircraft engines, ordnance and shipbuilding:
1. Aluminum rolling mills.
2. Magnesium plants using electric furnace methods.
3. Alloy steels and ferro-alloys.

B. Munitions:
1. Brass for shell casings and fuses.
2. Synthetic nytrogen for explosives.
3. Smoke . . creating chemical mixtures.
4. War gases.

C. Plastics for airplane parts.

Breckinridge Backs War If Necessary

Wilson Aide States Position in Debate With Danaher, Nye

War against Hitler by the United States, if necessary, "to preserve the freedom of mankind in the world" was advocated last night by Col. Henry Breckinridge, Assistant Secretary of War under President Wilson, in a Nation-wide radio broadcast from Washington.

He sanctioned such a step by answering "yes" to a direct question from Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, during a debate on whether this country should make World War destroyers available to England.

Isolationist Senators Nye and Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut, spoke against releasing the destroyers. Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, and Col. Breckinridge favored the proposal. They spoke in Theodore Granik's "American Forum of the Air" at the Willard Hotel.

"War of Annihilation"

"This," declared Breckinridge, "is a war of annihilation. Starting with the blinding and enslavement of their own peoples, Hitler and Mussolini are on the march to destroy free civilization.

"Only their own destruction can accomplish the resurection of the peoples who lie stunned and crushed under their iron heel. If America, confused by a babel of tongues, divided by fallacy and sophistry, fails to act, it will court and suffer calamity."

Asked by Nye if America should stop the dictators "even if it means war," Breckinridge answered, "Yes."

"Then that answers the whole question of tonight's debate," replied Nye.

"Greatest Threat Ever Made"

Breckinridge described Hitler "and his jackal Mussolini" as "the greatest threat ever made to civilized man in the annals of modern history" and declared "50 destroyers to England today may be worth 500 to us five weeks from now."

Nye and Danaher contended transfer of destroyers would constitute an act of war and would be contrary to an act of 1917 prohibiting delivery of war vessels to belligerent nations.

Pepper denied emphatically and "unequivocally" that it would be an act of war.

Promises Legal Sanction

To Danaher's contentions that the proposal would violate the new Navy bill, the United States' pledge at The Hague Convention, resolutions of the Panama Conference of October, 1939, and principles laid down by Thomas Jefferson, Pepper replied:

"I could give a legal argument which in my opinion would provide a complete answer to the Senator from Connecticut." Instead, he said he would guarantee that a legal opinion which would "stand up in the Department of Justice or any court of law in the land" would be obtained before the step was taken.

Arguing that supplying the ships to Britain may mean the difference between victory and defeat, Pepper and Breckinridge declared both coasts of the United States would be vulnerable if England's fleet was destroyed.

Pontius Pilate Cited

Danaher and Nye replied that was all the more reason for the United States to keep its destroyers, since every bit of naval power was needed at home.

Pepper maintained the United States was bound by the Kellogg Pact not to mimic Pontius Pilate by holding "I have nothing to do with this matter."

The destroyer proposal was described by Nye as "but a continuation of that campaign of fear which can push us further into Europe's war."

Ships For Germany

Conceding Germany might take over Britain's fleet, including America's 50 destroyers, he asked:

"What rhyme or reason is there in a program that makes available to Germany our own ships to use against us when she takes over the British fleet?"

Accused by Pepper of voting "no" to all measures not strictly isolationist, such as the Neutrality Act's amendment and conscription, Nye replied:

"Yes, and when it comes, and I am afraid it is coming—the demand for a declaration of war—shall continue to vote 'no.'"

partment and the Maryland Roads Commission to map road improvements vital to broad national defense as well as strategic Army needs.

May Use WPA Funds

Funds for these projects, he suggested, might be forthcoming from funds allocated to the WPA or the War Department.

Gov. O'Conor's statement, which cited the "tremendous scope of the suggested program," merely noted that "the Maryland (roads) commission recommended that the costs of construction, rights of way and engineering of the improvements be provided primarily by special Federal appropriation, because of its importance in connection with defense highway needs."

Chairman Ezra B. Whitman, of the roads commission, estimated the cost of the proposed program at a minimum of $50,000,000.

The road-building program described in O'Conor's statement includes the relocation of Route No. 111, the York road to the Pennsylvania line, and Route No. 40, from Baltimore to Frederick. Both would be developed ultimately into four-lane divided highways.

Others to Be Improved

All other State roads designated as of importance to defense needs would receive realignment and regrading treatment, in addition to the construction of stabilized shoulders of 8 to 10 feet.

Of the present Washington-Annapolis road, Route 50 (the Defense highway), the Federal report submitted to O'Conor stated "any addition of military traffic volume will necessitate building a new road."

The report also recommended prompt enactment of State legislation giving the Maryland Roads Commission the right to begin construction of a new right of way immediately after a fair valuation of the necessary property is obtained from competent authority.

All Americas May Consult On Defenses

Marshall Invites Latin Army Officers To Inspection Tour

By Russell Turner

Highly placed sources predicted last night that general inter-American defense consultations may result from the forthcoming inspection of United States military establishments by military leaders of the 20 Latin-American republics.

Invitations were extended Saturday by Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the United States Army, to the chief of staff and one officer of each of the other American republics to visit the United States this October and see for themselves the steps this country is taking to prepare its armed defenses against any eventuality, including possible invasion of this hemisphere.

Some observers felt the trip would be largely "window dressing" for informal discussions of a unified hemispheric military program. States next October and see for be a logical corollary to appointment of the Joint United States-Canadian Defense Board, which meets for the first time at Ottawa today.

The board is designed to map plans for joint action by this country and Canada in event of any attempt to invade North America.

Consultations among the Latin-American military chieftains and United States experts, it was felt, might be held with a view toward mapping of similar plans for joint action in event of an attempt to invade the southern part of this hemisphere.

President Roosevelt gave instructions to United States members of the joint board when they met at the White House Saturday in response to his summons. Mayor LaGuardia, of New York, chosen as chairman of the delegation, said Mr. Roosevelt "outlined his views on the situation." He refused to discuss what those views were.

Base Plans to Be Settled

It was generally believed, however, that one of the most important issues to be settled will be plans whereby United States armed forces may use Canadian air and naval bases. The board is primarily a planning body and, at least insofar as this country is concerned, will not have authority to make binding commitments.

Its establishment was regarded as a step toward bringing Canada into closer cooperation with the American republics, as well as possibly an indirect method of increasing United States aid to Great Britain.

Assignment of Capt. Oliver M. Read to be naval and air attache to the United States Legation at Ottawa also was regarded as a definite indication of closer cooperation. It will be the first time in the 150 years of American history that this country has maintained a military observer in Canada.

Barkley Is Pleased

Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, the Democratic Senate leader, said yesterday that this country ought to acquire "a whole string" of air and naval bases guarding the Panama Canal.

Commenting upon the disclosure in Bermuda yesterday that the great sound there would be made available to the United tates for an air base and possibly for a naval base, the Senator told newsmen:

"I think it's a very fine indication of the spirit of those who control Bermuda to offer it to us."

Barkley said that the Great Sound, about 700 miles southeast of New York, was a desirable "if not indispensable" outpost for defense of the Atlantic approaches to the United States.

He added that the Bermuda site was only one of many which this country ought to acquire. Recalling that the British possessions of Newfoundland, Trinidad, Barbados and the Bahamas had all been mentioned in reports concerning negotiations for the acquisition of additional bases, the Administration leader said the location of bases was a military and technical matter which he was not competent to discuss.

"But we ought to have a whole string of bases along the islands guarding the Panama Canal," he declared.

krieg on this country started, and has seen it within the past few days, since the Germans claimed to have wiped it out.

The yard is still operating, the building program is continuing and the port is functioning as the most important naval establishment on the south coast.

With another correspondent I was given permission by the commander in chief at Portsmouth to inspect the yard. Bombs wiped out three small buildings, sank the admiral's barge, and hit two other small craft, but all the other ships in the establishment were undamaged.

At the Portland naval base farther along the coast, the picture was much the same. There the vice admiral allowed us to wander around the naval yard, and to look over the damage the Nazis have done in recent raids. Though he admitted several ships had been hit during the raids, all essential equipment of the naval yard was still operating.

A flight of bombers had flown right across and had dropped six bombs, destroying two nearby sheds but aside from smashing windows in a private house and knocking off all its doors, the raiders had not caused much damage.

In a leaflet raid several days ago, the British gave warning of this mornings attack as a "foreign feature" of the fair.

Schools to Fill 20,000 Defense Jobs

By Edward Ryan

Vocational schools are expected to graduate 20,000 workers into new defense jobs by the end of this month, Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt reported yesterday.

McNutt's report, prepared by John W. Studebaker, Commissioner of Education, for the National Defense Commission, said that 80,614 persons had enrolled for defense training during July, first month of the program.

About 3,000 of the summer vocational students had found jobs in private industries by the end of July, he said, and according to recent reports this total will be boosted to 20,000 by September 1.

McNutt said that the figures, gathered from 41 States and the District of Columbia, showed that "the training of workers in vocational schools is one of the swiftest moving phases of the national defense program."

The vocational training program was started on July 1, with a $15,000,000 appropriation, to provide new workers with skills needed by defense industries, and to improve workers already on the job. Of those who enrolled in July, the report said, 31,604 persons went into preemployment courses, and 29,010 into "refresher" courses.

Among their studies have been blueprint reading, lathe work, milling, parachute making, welding, riveting, tool making, pattern making, drafting, electricity, radio, aviation sheet metal, foundry and machine shop work.

Washington's share in the national total during the first month was 505 vocational students, all in preemployment courses.

Immigration and postal officials will start tomorrow quizzing and fingerprinting 3,500,000 or more persons to build up in four months the Nation's first complete register of aliens on American soil.

Among the information officials expect to uncover will be the first data on the number of aliens now living here who entered the country illegally, and a factual starting point for recommending new alien legislation to Congress.

So far their statements about the number of aliens in the United States are careful guesswork, based on census reports and considerable mathematics. The registration directors will have to make their own reliable figures. Of the estimated total, about 7,000 aliens are believed to live in the District.

A few aliens have already started registering by mail, but this process won't work. The mistake, officials said, came after sample questionnaires were distributed to aliens through the postoffices. Several hundred samples have been sent to Washington, all filled out. Only difficulty is that the sample sheet cannot be made official and the necessary fingerprints can't be taken by mail.

Deadline for starting registration is 9 a. m. tomorrow. Last deadline is December 27, 4 months away. The registration sheets, containing 15 questions, will be filled out, and the fingerprint records taken at local postoffices. In most of them separate rooms are being provided for aliens to fill out blanks, and for the interviewers who will help on answering the questions and taking the fingerprints.

A heavy rush is expected at both ends of the registration period, officials said, with a lull during most of the four months. The registration sheets will be sent into the Washington office, the fingerprint cards into the Justice Department's files. On the basis of the returns, the registration office will compile a report for Administration officials and Congress.

Unions: District officials of the A. F. G. E. are seeking an executive order to prohibit any changes of work for Government employes while adjustments of their grade are pending; also new legislation that would give all men called into military service the right to vote on national issues that come up during their enlistment.

U. F. W. A. officials are trying to get the War Department to countermand an order which, they charged, requires civilian instructors in the Third Corps Area CCC camps to be on the job more than 65 hours a week.

Hindsight and Foresight

Is America Going Soft?

BY HOLGAR J. JOHNSON
President Institute of Life Insurance

THE enemies of democracy are saying that we are going soft. I recognize the danger, but I challenge the fact.

JOHNSON

Perhaps we are riding when we ought to walk. Maybe we are sitting in the stands when we ought to be playing in the game. That doesn't prove that we are soft, however. In the last war, our boys proved they could hold their own in endurance with anybody.

Our critics say things are too easy for us industrially—that we have far more than our share of raw materials. Well, I can show you places on the world map where there are plenty of raw materials with nobody using them, and I can show you other places where raw materials were never used until Americans came in and started things humming.

A high standard of living does not necessarily mean softness, as long as we realize that this standard depends on an honest day's work. I believe that most people who count recognize this and live up to it.

TO me a real proof of the toughness of our moral fiber is our willingness to sacrifice some of today's luxury and pleasure to gain tomorrow's security for our families and ourselves. A nation where 64 million people carry life insurance for this purpose certainly hasn't gone soft.

And I have a deep-seated conviction that anyone who tries to take away from the rank and file of America its hard-earned standards of living and its hard-won security, will find he has caught a Tartar.

Skilled Workers Unlikely to Be Drafted

(Recently the Senate adopted an amendment exempting divinity students as well as ordained ministers. As with a number of other proposed amendments, ultimate disposition of this proviso must await final passage.)

The weeding out of registrants into "Class A-1" men, qualified in every way for immediate military duty, will begin the twenty-fifth day after the President signs the bill. The local selection board will then mail the questionnaires to the registrants picked in the lottery.

The information forms are extremely comprehensive. In order to obtain all possible data needed by the boards, they demand detailed information on the candidate's physical condition, his dependents, his job, his national allegiance, and his convictions in regard to war.

Under the dependency section, for example, the proposed questionnaire asks married men if their wives are employed, and, in effect, if the latter could work, should the husbands be needed in the Army.

It asks the prospective soldier the amount of his annual income, gross and net; what percentage is earned; the value of his real estate holding and all his other property; and whether he owns his home.

Under a section entitled "Information for Military Authorities" (the job section) the registrant is required to state his occupation and what specific work he performs; his weekly salary, his technical training and any other abilities he has that would be valuable in the industrial mobilization of this country.

Obviously, after John Doe writes "foreman in airplane factory" in the occupation blank, he will never be sent any closer to the Army than his own assembly line.

A member of the Selective Service Committee explained: "We don't want men of that type in active service. They do 10 times as much good right where they are."

He added that under conscription it will be possible to hold the skilled worker at his job, while under the recruiting system there is no way of preventing such a man from volunteering, even though he thus discounts his value to national defense by 90 per cent.

In the World War, England was forced to demobilize whole battalions already in the trenches and send them home to run the factories.

A long series of questions is asked agricultural workers. There must be no wartime food shortage.

"How many years have you been a farmer? Are you a laborer, overseer, hired manager or share cropper? Do you own your own farm? Do you live on it? How many acres do you cultivate? What is the yield of your crops?" These are samples of the questions the Government will ask its draft-age farmers.

One Board for Every 30,000

Other sections of the questionnaire tell the conscientious objector to name his particular sect or creed. Ministers must state when, where and how they were ordained, and whether they are now authorized to preach.

Government officials must designate their positions and indicate whether they are elective or appointive.

Within five days, the form must be returned, completely filled out, to the selection board. It is expected there will be at least one such selection board for every 30,000 in a given community.

Then it is up to the board to study the answers and decide whether the registrant is to be placed in Class I.

A great deal of discretionary power is necessaryily vested in the local boards. It is they who will decide whether a worker is really "indispensable" to his industry, whether a man's wife could support herself alone, whether a man who represents himself as a minister actually spends any time in the pulpit.

From disastrous experiences in the Civil War, when conscription operated Federally, evolved the decentralized theory of selective service.

As proved in the World War, the person best qualified to know whether a man should be conscripted is someone living in his own community. Most likely the members of your local board will be your neighbors.

World War Fortunates

In deciding which jobholders will be conscripted and which left at their posts, the boards will undoubtedly be guided by decisions of the last war. Here are percentages of workers in various industries, deferred from service in 1917:

Agriculture, 38.3 per cent; coal, 33.7 per cent; other mining (copper, gold, iron), 49.6 per cent; oil and gas, 39.9 per cent; building construction, 45.9 per cent; chemicals (including powder and cartridge manufacture), 62.9 per cent; clay, glass and stone, 33.7 per cent; clothing, 30.7 per cent; food (processed), 32.5 per cent; iron and steel—blast furnaces and rolling mills, 71 per cent; ship and boatbuilding, 69.9 per cent; agricultural implements, automobile factories and railroad shops, 52 per cent; metal industries, except for iron and steel, 58.7 per cent. In luxury industries, deferment was negligible.

In general, it can be said that if you are an unskilled worker your chances of being deferred are small. But, if you are a skilled worker—even in a "nonessential" industry—deferment or even exemption for the duration, is almost a certainty.

The selection boards will be liberal with deferments at present, when the emergency is not acute, military men say. If and when the country goes to war, there will, of course, be a different story.

Of all classes, professional men probably will have the least chance of obtaining deferments. The industrial mobilizers would find relatively little use for an engineer or doctor on the assembly line. But the Army will need both—in plenty.

(Tomorrow The Post will describe the quota system of calling up Class A-1 candidates and the manner in which they will be inducted into the Army.)

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

DOUBLE-JOINTED 'JIVE' MAN. "Jivin' Jack" Schaeffer will not leave the Casino Royal, as previously announced. But he will play in the Capitol Theater orchestra, beginning tomorrow. After endless stewing and planning, a way has been worked out for Jack to hold both posts. He will be at the Capitol Theater for every stage show, also he'll be at the Casino Royal for every floor show and most of the dance periods. This is the first time that any Washington musician has attempted such a heavy chore, but "Jivin' Jack" is the boy to do it successfully. Naturally, it puts him in the heavy dinero. Solution of the problem is ideal, for it would have been a catastrophe for Schaeffer to have been lost to the night spot picture . . . An all new revue begins at Casino Royal today. It includes the Derle Kersten Girls, from Chicago, dancers O'Donnell and Lloyd, and acrobat Len Lenihan.

Brazilian sambas (relatives of the rumba) are now being played in the Mayflower Lounge. They're the outgrowth of suggestions made to Maestro Dick Koontz by Margot Garreti Zuberbuhler, Buenos Aires visitor in our town.

INSANITY' CONTAGIOUS. In Mayfair, "Mousey" Garner's madness has spread to Sammy Richardson, who's now going berserk at 11 p. m. regularly with something called "You'd Never Know the Whitewash Stables Now." Then Sammy and Frank Flanagan start double-talk on the bass and saxaphone. Only member of the Garner group who doesn't act like an advanced psychopathic case is sweet

ADELE VAN, Glen Echo's "Sing Song Girl".

Ruth McCullough, who's singing a mighty pretty version of "Blueberry Hill," a number that's getting bigger every minute.

"WILLKIE'S INN" is the title of a new Republican campaign song just written by Dannie Danford, of the Neptune Room, and Political Writer Leslie Sanders. You can take the "Inn" to mean either the White House or just "in." The number has been submitted to the Republican National Committee.

RAINBOW'S NEW SCHEDULE. Cocktail hour dancing in the Rainbow Room will be on from 5 to 7, beginning today, with the full orchestra and novachord interludes continuing until 8:30. Dance music will be resumed at 10. . . . This also implies some changing around at the New Bavarian. Rainbow's Durward Bowersox will hereafter play only at the Bavarian's luncheon hour, with Jane Marlow and her violin taking over his cocktail hour spot with Eddie Whitesel.

Conga, tango and rumba steps are blended in a new dance just created by St. Clair and Day, and to be presented for the first time on the Shoreham Terrace this week. They're thinking of calling it the "tancorumba."

LOTUS HOLDOVER. Tom Ball's "Novelty Revue" is held over this week at the Lotus. That was natural, because it's one of the best from the dancing pretties going the "South American Way" to the zazz-u-zazz finale. Magico Rinaldo is both smooth and amusing. Babarina and her toy dogs deserve that often misused word, "novelty." Dancers Wes Adams and Lisa would shine in any theater revue. . . . Manager Dick Lam tells us there'll be a "great big show from Boston" at the Lotus next week.

CUBA LIBRE! Both Ortiz and Ramon, of Madrilion's Trio Lirico are from Havana. Ramon has been in the U. S. for only four years, but Ortiz is rather a "Latin from Manhattan" because his father scented bad days coming in Cuba away back in 1914 and moved the whole Ortiz family to New York. That was "Cuba Libre!" for them.

HI HAT BULLETIN. Oscar is on vacation but is spending it moving into his new house and getting settled down . . . Marianne Lee is wearing a necklace of sea shells. Makes her look like a mermaid. And she sounds like a lorelei when she sings "On a Simmering Summer ay" . . . Tom Dick and Harry, the Hi Hat Cavaliers, are so popular with the folks that they'll be staying right on in Washington until the last of September.

Tomorrow night's big event will be the "Second Anniversary Party" at the Rustic Cabin. There'll be gala by the gallon, oceans of rhythm, two big floor shows, favors and prizes. Yea, friends, it'll be a party for the book.

BUZZ-BUZZ! Plans are going forward for some highly fancy, not to say elaborate, doings at the Lounge Riviera this fall. In the meantime Riviera is rolling along as one of the handsomest, most diverting spots in the country. Pete Macias and his cohorts "give" their all in rhythm, and Harriet Derck sings "I Can't Get Started With You" like a nightingale carrying a torch.

COOLER DAYS are inspiring the Harrington Tavern chef to create hot, savory and substantial, luncheon and dinner dishes. They leave you with that comfortable, well-upholstered feeling . . . At Dick's Grill you'll also find tasty and steaming specials—notably the pork chop mixed grill and clam chowder.

Maryland Gardens has the most novelly presented floor show in the city. Instead of getting a ringside table, you get a "waterside table" and view the gayeties across a gleaming, aquamarine pool that reminds you of the World's Fair.

ANCHORED IN THE ANCHOR ROOM. Frankie Meyers has taken to playing boogie-woogie piano, does a beautiful job. You should see Eileen George's new flowered cretonne skirt. She says she's going to make curtains out of it when she's through with it. But it's stunning, at that. Goodby now.

R. A. F. Attacks Axis War Factories

ing bombs was heard in what was devastating raids on Germany's war production industries, power stations and airdromes. The more sucessful these attacks the fewer bombers Germany will be able to send to Britain.'

Late tonight R. A. F. bombers were hurling their fourth attack in as many nights against the German gun emplacements along the French Channel coast.

The big German guns, silent all day, bellowed again tonight and at least three shells were reported to have burst in the Dover region.

At the same time, searchlights swept the sky over the French coast and the muffled thunder of explodbelieved to be an R. A. F. raid on the Nazi gun nests.

Saturday night R. A. F. bombers attacked Nazi "Big Bertha" positions around Cap Gris Nez, while other British fliers combed the coastline between Calais and Boulogne in an effort to locate gun sites. Whether any new ones were found was not stated.

For the fourth time in a fortnight British bombing planes hummed across France, leaped over the Alps and descended on Italy where they attacked targets at Milan and Sesto Calende, the center of the important Savoia aircraft plant.

Two bombers aimed their loads at the Magneto Mareilli factory in the Sesto San Giovanni district of Milan around midnight. The first plane over that target started fires with high explosive and incendiary bombs, and the flames guided a second plane to the same spot. The pilot of the second plane dropped two sticks of bombs but he was not able to say whether his explosives did added damage.

A third British raider bombed the Savoia airframe plant in Sesto Calende, at the southern end of Lake Maggiore.

The Air Ministry summed up the results of all the attacks on Italy in a single word "successful," but did not go into details.

All planes engaged in the raids over Italy returned safely, but two machines failed to return from widespread raids over Germany, France, Belgium and Holland, the air ministry said.

For more than an hour, beginning at half-past 11 Saturday night over the Daimler-Benz Factory at Stuttgart, one of the most important armament and armored car plants in western Germany, British bombing planes carried out what the air ministry described as "heavy methodical attacks," despite the fact that they encountered a severe anti-aircraft fire and brilliant concentrations of searchlights.

In a short time the main buildings of the plant were enveloped in flames antd a series of explosions followed, the air ministry said.

Simultaneously other British raiders scored direct hits on the Oppau-Farbenindustie Nitrogen plant at Ludwigshafen. R. A. F. bombers flew over that plant until after 1 o'clock this morning, dropping many bombs, according to pilots' reports, caused three heavy explosions. A synthetic oil plant at Frankfurt-on-the-Main was also bombed.

Italians Warn Of 'New Surprise'

Gayda Tells British Action Will Come Within a Few Days

By the Associated Press

Rome, Aug. 25.—Fascism's chief editorial spokesman served notice on Britain today that "it will not be many more days before she finds herself up against some new surprise."

This warning, without any hint of what Italy and Germany might have in mind, was sounded by Virginio Gayda during a new surge of Italian air raids on the British island fortress of Malta, continued air sparring in North Africa and three British night air raids on northern Italy.

Considerable speculation arose immediately whether Gayda referred to possible Italian action against Egypt, a thrust in the Balkans or to the long-expected German attepmt to invade Britain.

Greek Tension Mounts

The tenor of his remarks, made in the newspaper Voce D'Italia, was such that either separate German or Italian action or both could have been in the writer's mind.

Tension between Italy and Greece remained undiminished and Fascist officials declined to throw any light on the possibility of a move against that pro-British neighbor of Italian-annexed Albania.

They met with "no comment" reports that Italian troops are massing on the border of Greece in the wake of Fascist press demands for border territory—demands the Greeks have indicated they would resist.

Greek reservists from 14 classes in the Epirus district at the southern tip of Albania were reported today to have received individual summoneses to serve in the border garrison.

[Although diplomatic activity in the Greek-Italian crisis was halted because of Sunday, Greek military authorities pushed ahead with defense measures. A steady movement of troops to key frontier posts was noted and additional private vehicles were requisitioned.]

Some observers thought Gayda's words might have been by way of explaining to the Italian public why the threatened summer invasion of England had not yet been attempted, with the time for unfavorable winter fogs over the channel drawing near.

The Italian high command announced meanwhile that four British planes and one Italian bomber were shot down in raids yesterday on Malta.

(Reports from Valletta, Malta, said one Italian plane was downed, another believed damaged in a Saturday raid in which the Italians dropped numerous bombs without inflicting casualties. No mention was made of any British plane losses.)

In North Africa, the daily communique said, two British destroyers were driven off in an attempted night bombardment of Bardia, Libyan port on the Mediterranean, 30 miles from the Egyptian frontier.

Italian bombers were said to have destroyed three armored cars in a raid on a British motorized column between Sidi Barrani and the Libyan border, and heavily bombed airports at Garissa and Wajir, in Kenya, and military objectives at Daga, in the Lower Sudan. The British raided Tobruk, Libyan port, wounding five persons and causing "extremely small damage."

British Bombers Attack Berlin

children cowering in air-raid shelters, only distant detonations and occasional flashes came, but 40 minutes later the din broke out with even greater intensity.

Air battles appeared to be raging in the dark sky over the center of the city, experiencing its first real taste of attack from the air.

(Adolf Hitler was not in Berlin when the British air force attacked, according to both Italian and British radio broadcasts, which said Saturday night he had left for his "front line headquarters" somewhere in France, where "large military operations are taking place.")

Bristol Reported in Flames

A terrific 36-hour bombing assault has left Britain's great Portsmouth naval base and the industrial port of Bristol in "giant flames," the German high command reported yesterday.

Striking according to the "planned destruction" of British military and industrial objectives, the high command said waves of Nazi planes Saturday night and early Sunday raked Portsmouth, Bristol and Great Yarmouth "with the heaviest-caliber bombs."

One hundred and fifteen British planes were destroyed during air battles and bombing attacks Saturday and Sunday, DNB, official Nazi news agency reported. Thirty-two German planes were listed as missing. Of the British planes destroyed, DNB said, 51 were shot down in air battles Sunday over the British Isles while only 12 German planes were lost.

The high command stated that a German U-boat had sunk a British destroyer of the Viscount class and a 700-ton merchantman in an attack on a strongly-guarded convoy.

Taking advantage of the lull in bad weather, the German raiders swept over Britain early Saturday and continued to carry out bombing attacks throughout the night, the Nazis reported.

Portsmouth, under repeated German bombing assaults, was picked as one of the principal objectives and bombers roared over the naval base with its black wharves, cranes and gray battleships for 36 hours.

Another bombing squadron, meanwhile, swept down on Bristol, important commercial gateway, and bombed factories, chemical plants, munition centers and shipping DNB reported.

The high command said fires were started early Saturday night in both Portsmouth and Bristol and that reconnaissance pilots today reported they still were blazing. Throughout the night, it was said, "giant flames could be seen from German planes on their return flight."

German reconnaissance pilots returning from England Sunday reported, according to DNB, that the British had abandoned the Manston airdrome in Kent.

Rolls-Royce Factory Hit

The "frightful effect" of bombs on the landing field and airport buildings at Canterbury were reported clearly visible by German pilots. The German air force was reported by the Nazi news agency to have bombed and destroyed the greater part of the British Rolls-Royce factory, where Merlin motors for Spitfire fighters are manufactured.

Other German planes were said to have carried out attacks on airplane works at Derby, Kingston and Rochester.

"Bright flames bore witness to the perfect aim of the attacking machines," DNB said. "The British counterattack was most weak."

British Raids Admitted

The high command reported that bombing attacks had partially destroyed barracks, hangars, factories and camps on the airfields at Northweald, Hornchurch and Ramsgate and near Dover.

British planes, it was admitted, flew over nothern, western and southwestern Germany during the night. Several houses were struck and, the high command said, two persons were killed and eight others were wounded when a bomb struck a prison camp. DNB said three towns "suffered minor damages."

British Sub Returns After Thrilling Cruise

London, Aug. 25.—The British submarine Sea Lion has returned to her base after having sunk a 3,500-ton enemy supply ship, dueled with a U-boat and had both her periscopes carried away in a collision with a large German merchantman, it was revealed today.

A 670-ton vessel of the Shark class, launched in 1934, the Sea Lion is credited with sinking three German transports and an antisubmarine ship during the Norway campaign.

Peking, Aug. 25.—Following last week's activities on the part of the Chinese Eighth Route Army, disrupting traffic, rail lines and dynamiting bridges, it is now officially admitted that daring Chinese raiders are at present within a few miles of Peking's walls in the vicinity of the summer palace.

Rumors have it that Chinese forces have even captured the town of Chinchow, 20 miles from Peking.

Biddle Reminds Aliens They Must Register

Enrolling 3,600,000 Begins Tuesday, Ends December 26

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 25.—Francis Biddle, Solicitor General of the United States, today reminded an estimated 3,600,00 aliens in this country that they must register some time between next Tuesday and December 26.

He pointed out in a radio address that under the law every alien over 14 years of age must register and be fingerprinted, that the registration would take place at all first and second class postoffices and at all postoffices located at county seats, and that failure to comply "calls for severe penalties."

He informed aliens, too, that the registration would require only 20 minutes, on the average.

The solicitor related that after their identity had been established, they would be asked how and when they entered the United States, how long they intended to stay, whether they had any naval or military service, the names of any clubs, societies or organizations to which they belong, the nature of their activities in behalf of these organizations and whether these organizations promote "the interests of a foreign government."

Urging Americans to help the aliens during the registration period and to aid them in seeking citizenship, Biddle said:

"It is estimated that there are in this country some 3,600,000 aliens. Many of inem are on the road to citizenship. An overwhelming majority of them . . . are loyal to democratic traditions."

Ortiz Vote Seen As a Victory For Democracy

Copyright by New York Times

Buenos Aires, Aug. 25.—As Argentina relaxed today from the nervous tension of last week's political crisis the feeling was general that democracy won a historic victory last night when the joint session of Congress voted 170 to 1 against acceptance of President Roberto M. Ortiz's resignation.

It is considered highly significant that the only vote which prevented the ballot from being unanimous was cast by Senator Matias Sanchez Sorondo, whom dispatches from Rome on Friday asserted would be foreign minister in Argentina's forthoming Fascist cabinet.

this attack three at least of the enemy were destroyed.

"Together with an enemy bomber which was shot down after a 50-mile chase early yesterday morning and another which was destroyed off the South Wales coast yesterday afternoon, this brings the total of enemy losses up to 39, according to the latest reports." Later reports brought the toll to 54.

Of the 11 admittedly lost British planes, the air ministry said, "It is known that three of our pilots are safe."

The Germans contented themselves during the daylight Sunday, with isolated sorties on other parts of England and Wales.

However, the attack intensified after nightfall with a first wave of 50 German planes reported over the southeast coast. The Nazi bombers started several fires but damage was said to have been slight.

Antiaircraft batteries went into action along with Royal Air Force planes.

Another battle was reported tonight over the southeast coast and two Messerschmitts were said to have been shot down. Shortly afterward, planes believed to be German were reported over Wales and another southwestern English region.

A home security ministry spokesman said that the air raids Saturday night, which caused three alarms in the heart of London, started two large fires, one in the "City"—London's closely-built financial section in the center of the downtown business district. The other was in a warehouse district.

Casualties were few and the fires quickly brought under control, however, the spokesman declared, although he acknowledged that several hundred bombs had fallen on the vast, sprawling city.

Most of the bombs, explosives and incendiaries had been dropped in a circle around the center of the city outside the protective balloon barrage and had damaged at least one factory and several warehouses besides burning down a number of dwellings and business properties.

In a northwestern town last night several persons were killed and some injured by bombs dropped on the workers class district from a lone Nazi raider.

Two schools, two public houses and a church were damaged. It was the town's first raid of the war.

Two persons were reported killed and several injured when bombs fell on a working class district in a northeast town. Bomb hits burst water mains in another nearby town.

Throughout Saturday, falling explosives and incendiary bombs caused considerable property damage and an undisclosed number of casualties, some fatal, in the northeast.

In one coastal town, a gasworks was hit and 200 persons were left homeless. In another district further south, 30 persons were made homeless and a fire was started when two high explosive bombs struck near a large factory.

Brush and timber were set aflame on a northeast moor by incendiary bombs.

Three bombs fell near a waterworks in the southeast early today but caused no damage.

In a southeast town, a bomb ploughed its way under an air raid shelter and exploded, killing a woman inside. High explosives and incendiary bombs also caused some damage and casualties in a southwest town.

The home security ministry spokesman admitted that damage caused at Dover, Portsmouth and Ramsgate — all potential footholds for any sea-borne Nazi invasion—was extensive but asserted it was "by no means catastrophic."

Delayed-action bombs exploded periodically in Portsmouth yesterday. Because of bombs lying about, a number of streets were closed off and residents of the emptied areas were moved into schools and fed by the muncipality.

Many families in London awoke Sunday in shelters, having spent the night under the security of their thick roofs rather than risk the peril of delayed action bombs or take the chance of being hurried underground again by new raids.

In one shelter in a business street, a 70-year-old clergyman led prayer while outside firemen, even after daybreak, continued to turn their hoses on flames flaring up occasionally from bomb-kindled fires and air raid precaution workers searched in ruins.

Londoners found stark evidence that air siege had made their city part of the war's front line. They saw an ancient church gutted by fire, a bomb-scarred cemetery in the Thames Estuary district, four flames seared warehouses in one area and a home where a bull's-eye bomb hit had killed three occupants.

In several places areas of three or four blocks were closed to sightseers.

Hospital Fire Quelled

Elsewhere in the metropolitan area, incendiary bombs struck the roof of a hospital but the fire was extinguished by firemen and nurses before it could spread. Another incendiary bomb fell on a factory but spluttered out on the structure's asbestos roof.

The Attack On London

In the greater City of London more than 8,200,000 men, women and children live and move and have their being. That is almost a fifth of the entire population of Great Britain, more people than are to be found in the whole of that vast region between the Rocky Mountains and the Pacific, yet living in an area of less than 700 square miles.

It is understandable, therefore, why the German aerial attack on the British metropolis Saturday, though resulting, as the British authorities insist, in the destruction of no military objectives, is believed to have produced a greater loss of life than resulted from any previous Nazi attack on British centers. Balloon barrages can force enemy planes to fly too high to make accurate bombardment possible; antiaircraft guns and fighter planes can play havoc with the enemy raiders and ultimately drive them off. But unless the invaders can actually be prevented from getting over the city there is no way to prevent them from dropping their loads of death and destruction.

That happened on Saturday. A good many of the bombs were of the incendiary type. They started great fires in London in crowded residential districts so that long after the raid was over a great pall of smoke hung over the city. What was for so long feared has now come to pass. London itself, capital of the kingdom, heart of the empire, a city rich in history, has for the first time though probably not the last become the target of the Nazi blitzkrieg.

The purpose appears to have been primarily psychological. Hitherto, despite repeated mass attacks on British centers, the British have shown no signs of weakening in their determination to fight on to the bitter end. Ports, harbor works, shops, railroads, factories, airfields have been bombed. An untold amount of damage has been done. But it is obvious that if the purpose of the mass raids undertaken during the fortnight following August 8 was to bring about the German mastery of the air over Britain, they did not succeed. Now Hitler may have decided to change his tactics. If what has happened during the last two days is any indication, the mass attack on military objectives may now be accompanied by raids whose sole purpose is terrorization.

The prospect for the people of the British metropolis is thus grim. They face the most fearful period in their city's long history. But it can be expected that they will face it with courage and fortitude and undying determination.

Retirement For Judges

Representative Murdock's bill to give judges of the District Police, Municipal and Juvenile Courts virtual lifetime appointments is worthy of serious study by the House Judiciary Committee to which it was referred.

The District Bar Association drafted the bill after carefully weighing the pros and cons of fixed terms for judges or service during good behavior. It was the opinion of the majority that the change would lead to the appointment of more able men than are customarily available for the local court benches.

These judges are now appointed for terms of six years, but often they are renominated several times. If they wish to remain on the bench, they must devote valuable time and effort to the securing of reappointments. And after almost an adult lifetime of service they face the prospect of retirement without pension.

The Murdock bill would solve the retirement problem which has been before the House Judiciary Committee for several years. It provides for retirement at half pay for judges who reach the age of 70 after 12 years of service. Such pensions also would be granted to judges already retired.

In view of the early age at which some judges are appointed in these courts, however, the provision for retirement at half pay of any judge who has served 20 years or more should be critically examined.

A feature of the bill that has practical advantages is the provision which would enable the presiding judge to call on retired judges for special service over periods of not more than three months. Retired judges could thus be used to prevent congestion of court calendars during the vacation season.

The present salary scale of the District courts is high enough to attract competent attorneys. Only the security of life tenure is needed to keep judges of a high caliber in these courts over long periods.

The Federal Government long ago learned that a judge appointed for life is likely to be more judicially minded than one elected or nominated for a fixed term. The same advantages would seem to apply to the District courts.

Bermuda Base

When the 13 colonies that were later to form the United States raised the banner of revolt against Great Britain in 1776, the British colonies in the West Indies refused to follow suit. Like Canada, they preferred to remain loyal to the British crown. And they have retained that loyalty in undiminished vigor to this day.

For this reason a certain measure of alarm was produced in the Bermudas, for instance, when it was announced that the United States and Great Britain had reached an agreement in principle regarding the establishment of American naval and air bases on British territory in this hemisphere. It was feared that such a development might result in an actual transfer of sovereignty over those colonies from Great Britain to the United States.

With this in mind, the Colonial Assembly of the Bermudas sent a memorial to the British Colonial Secretary stating that "the people of Bermuda are deeply disturbed lest some new conception of American hemispheric defense may affect the status of this ancient colony as an integral part of the British Commonwealth." "We earnestly pray," this memorial went on to say, "that the ties of tradition and the bonds of affection which unite us to the mother country may never be severed."

To this plea the British government replied that "there is no question of Bermuda or any part of it being separated from the British Empire or of the people of Bermuda ceasing to be British subjects." Satisfied on this score, the Colonial Assembly raised no objection to making the Great Sound of Bermuda available to the United States for an air base and possibly for a naval base on a 99-year lease.

Bermuda is to remain British. Henceforth, however, it will be an integral part of the American as well as the British defense systems as may, no doubt, be the case with other British colonial areas in this hemisphere.

The significance of such a development can hardly be overestimated. Together with the Act and Convention of Havana and the creation of the Canadian-American Joint Board on Defense it marks the strides being made by the United States in cooperation with its neighbors to safeguard this hemisphere against external aggression.

But much still remains to be done. The speed of action in the diplomatic sphere has not been matched in the field of American domestic legislation. After two months the Burke-Wadsworth bill is still being debated although nothing new has been said on the subject for days. And other legislative log-jams remain to be broken before American industry will be able to go full speed ahead on production for defense.

Eire And The War

There are some who believe that Hitler's apparent lack of success in the aerial blitzkrieg against England further imperils England's near neighbor on the west. For if the Nazi fliers find themselves unable to "soften" British defenses to the extent that would make actual invasion feasible, the Germans may intensify their counter-blockade.

As Mr. Vincent Sheean points out in a dispatch to the Nation, occupation of Ireland would be invaluable in case the Germans "wished to establish a siege all around England and to paralyze the western ports."

One thing seems plain: the Irish National Army, the Civil Guard, and the recently recruited volunteer defense forces would be quite inadequate to repel a Nazi invasion such as those launched against Denmark, Norway and the Low Countries. Yet the problem of how to get troops into Ireland in any force must be giving the German strategists, clever as they are, plenty of difficulty.

If the Nazis, with all the air bases they possess along the French coast, cannot gain control of the English Channel, it is not probable they can gain control of St. George's Channel or the Irish Sea.

Barring much greater internal treachery than one is justified in assuming on the basis of present information, it seems likely that the armed forces of Eire, with the assistance of the R. A. F., could cope successfully with German attempts to land troops by use of airplanes. There are only two airports in all the 26 counties of Southern Ireland and steps have been taken to guard such possible landing places as golf courses and playing fields.

Mr. Sheean is apprehensive, however, about gliders. "The fact is," he writes, "that gliders can land at 20 miles an hour and can come quite comfortably to rest on a bog or a hillside." But it hardly seems possible that more than a few hundred troops at best could be landed by this means. Success of such a venture would depend mainly on surprise. The gliders would have to be launched from planes, and planes so encumbered would be relatively easy prey for the fast fighters of the R. A. F. Besides the navigation of a glider over any great distance takes as much specialized skill as the piloting of a plane. Could Marshal Goering spare enough trained men for so doubtful an enterprise?

So long—but only so long—as the British control the air over their own Channel and their own island and over that stretch of the Atlantic between Brittany and the Southwestern Irish coast, Eire will probably have a respite from the danger that lately seemed so imminent.

Alien Registration

The registration and fingerprinting of aliens begins tomorrow and will continue for the next four months. The registration law was passed when public opinion was greatly aroused over revelations of "fifth column" activities in countries invaded by Nazi Germany. Fears that similar subversive elements operating in the United States might weaken our defense against alien, undemocratic political philosophies helped to speed the registration act to passage.

However, the compulsory registration of aliens should not be regarded merely as an emergency measure designed for the sole purpose of ferreting out spies and saboteurs. Important though it is to establish stricter control and supervision over suspicious aliens in these troublous times, compulsory registration of all aliens meets a need of long standing. Some system for identifying and keeping track of noncitizens is required at all times to aid enforcement of our immigration laws.

Law-abiding aliens have nothing to fear from answering the questions listed on the registration statements, whereas failure to register subjects them to heavy fines and imprisonment. The Department of Justice stresses the fact that the alien with nothing to conceal will find it advantageous to be properly registered and identified. An official record such as the Government demands offers protection against those misguided busybodies and mischief makers who regard every alien as a potential enemy.

It seems highly probable that Congress will soon pass some kind of draft legislation which will necessitate registering all male citizens within certain specified age groups. In that case the charge that registration of aliens constitutes an invidious singling out of special groups for interrogation will fall to the ground. Alien registration will then be recognized as part of a comprehensive system of fact-gathering required by our law enforcement agencies.

Our Government has until recent years known little and cared less about the personal affairs of the millions of individuals who constitute the population of the country. But census-taking, income-tax declarations, and applications for various kinds of Government insurance, work relief, and benefit payments have gradually accustomed large sections of the population to submit to the exactions of the official questionnaire.

Life in a democracy does not mean that everybody is free to live in anonymous obscurity, with his occupation and antecedents unknown to the authorities. There is nothing undemocratic about comprehensive systems of registration provided they are not of an inquisitorial character, designed to harass and oppress inoffensive people. The modern state, whether democratic or autocratic, has become such a potent and pervasive influence in the life of the average man that Government officials cannot perform their duties efficiently unless they know something of the personal histories and background of the individuals who compose the body politic.

The Republicans seem to be trying to warn this country against creating a Franklinstein.

The Younger Generation

August is astir. Birds on the wing. Adventuring fledglings finding flight. Looking not at all like their elders. Speckled robins. Purple finches with no ruby red. Goldfinches with pale yellow. Catbirds with short tails. But all flitting gayly. Testing their wings. Chattering all day. Skimming the meadows. Riding the winds. Making discoveries. Seeds in the garden. Grubs in the ground. Berries on the bushes. Water in the pool. Warmth in the sunshine. Cool covert in the pines. Rain of summer showers. A beautiful world.

Parent birds and youngsters singing sunrise matins. Chanting sunset vespers. Winging life abundant.

While on the shining telephone wires sits a long row of straight-backed swallows. Conferring on an extensive trip southward to strengthen friendly Latin-American relations. A flight of goodwill. Reminding everyone everywhere that in the words of the great English master.

'American' Prices

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Willkie, in his acceptance speech, summed up the farm problem in a few words, but he did not offer a solution. He said:

I believe that the Federal Government has a responsibility to equalize the lot of the farmer, with that of the manufacturer. If this cannot be done by parity of prices, other means must be found—with the least possible regimentation of the farmer's affairs.

All persons who know anything about the farm problem know that it is a price problem. Farmers should have prices on a par in purchasing power with industrial prices. There can be no question about it. Why, then, not give it to them? Why should farmers be compelled to take less than parity prices while the Government protects manufacturers in more than parity prices? Why does Mr. Willkie say "if this cannot be done by parity prices"? Why can it not be done by parity of prices?

The Government could, if it would, do for agriculture in the matter of prices what it has traditionally done for manufacturing industries. Since farmers have to pay American prices when they buy, why should they not be protected in the matter of receiving American prices when they sell?

Patriotism

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Anent the present American rush into conscription and thence into war—both of which issues, many feel, the American people have not been given time to consider calmly—it may be cogent to recall a remark of Dr. Johnson's, with, of course, Boswell's commonplace apology (published in the year 1791):

Patriotism having become one of our topicks, Johnson suddenly uttered, in a strange determined tone, an apothegm, at which many will start: "Patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel."

Boswell amends this obvious truth by saying that Dr. Johnson referred not to true patriotism, but to "that pretended patriotism which so many, in all ages and countries, have made a cloak for self-interest."

Mr. Ickes' Reply

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many began to wonder, after Willkies' speech, whom Big Government would select to answer. Big Jim Farley, having found New Deal goofiness too much for him, was not available. So the New Deal evidenced the fear in which it holds Willkie by the choice of none less than Blaster in Chief Harold L. Ickes, to call the names, thumb the noses, heave charges of demagoguery and exalt the New Deal in a speech that was itself a master work of demagogic perfection.

Big Business, Wall Street, utility monopoly—all these old reliables of your true demagogue got dragged out of the bogey closet, slightly dusty from recent neglect, to obey their master's voice and put on their act for the common peepul.

In his latest confession the New Deal's main achievements—unemployment, vast debt and bloated bureaucracy—were omitted from the long list recited by the New Deal giant killer.

Past successes may have blunted the New Dealers' ability to discover it, but an overdose of such stuff finally produces negative results. A slight weariness toward the Ickesian mannerisms has begun to develop.

It would pay the Republicans to subsidize the Ickes' appearances. Every speech made by him for Roosevelt is 50,000 votes in Willkie's bag.

Let The People Decide

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This country is still a democracy. Under this system the Government is merely delegated by the people to carry on the people's business.

The people are against the conscription bill and, despite this, the bill has proceeded through both houses of Congress, almost to the point of being passed. The people are against the bill and the people must be heard.

I suggest that a national referendum on the conscription issue be held on election day this year. Let the people decide and let Congress abide.

On Mud-Slinging

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial on "Mr. Ickes' Mud" was read with interest. If an administration must be supported by such disgraceful methods as used by Mr. Ickes in his radio speech, replying to the acceptance speech of Mr. Willkie's, then it is high time to have a change in such administration.

I don't wonder that Mr. Willkie was astounded that the President should authorize such a speech—if he did. We need a new set of Administration officials, who are not used to wallowing in mud!

Our offices of state and responsibility should be occupied by men of dignity and intelligence, who can be respected and deserve the high honors which such positions should command.

I don't wonder that people over this country are getting rather sick of the reckless manner in which important problems are being handled. We certainly are in dire need of a "New Deal" of Government officials.

OBSERVER.
Bethesda, Md., Aug. 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Every once in a while some article is too much to swallow. Your editorial of August 20 under the caption, "Ickes' Mud," happens to be that kind of article.

I, too, could have done without Mr. Ickes' "weasel talk," because that sort of thing is only a descent to the level on which the Republicans conduct their campaigns, and it is not a level one wishes to emulate. But the thing I am protesting is your mild reproach to Mr. Willkie for branding the President as "unscrupulous," and then upbraiding Mr. Ickes for "mud slinging."

Who started the mud slinging, may I ask? Was it not the G. O. P. standard-bearer? You know as well as I or anyone else that President Roosevelt has not tried to drag this country into war. You know that the President and Mr. Hull have strained their patience to breaking to try to bring the country to the realization of its grave danger, and that they are doing everything in their power to prepare for this danger. And you also know that they have had precious little cooperation or assistance from a muddle-headed Congress. Yet you can only very mildly reproach Mr. Willkie, while at the same time rebuking Mr. Ickes for "mud slinging."

Advice to Mr. Ickes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Whenever Secretary Ickes makes a speech, it brings to mind the story of an occasion when the late Secretary of the Navy Swanson was opposed by Senator Glass in a bitter political campaign in Virginia.

At a political meeting held in Lynchburg, the home of Senator Glass, that gentleman lit into his opponent, the soft-voiced, always courteous Swanson. Mr. Glass, with his caustic tongue, not only literally flayed his adversary but severely criticized the Federal Government and everything in and about Washington and the Congress.

When Glass had finished, Swanson stepped to the rostrum and began his reply quietly as follows: "Ladies and Gentlemen: I have been living in Washington for several years. I know it thoroughly from one end to the other, and one thing I can tell you—there is no place there for a wasp to build his nest."

Mr. Glass failed to carry his own district in that campaign. Mr. Ickes might take notice. The public quickly tires of scolds.

Great Britain's American Islands

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: International conditions show very acutely our defense necessity for not merely bases in the Caribbean, but of outright ownership of the islands of Bermuda and the Bahamas directly off the main coast. These should be ours, as is Hawaii, and therefore safe from transfer to any foreign nation, or occupancy from abroad.

Our transatlantic mail carriers, with increased hazards to American passengers, pilot, and mails, are now compelled to take a longer and more hazardous trip—giving up landing on Bermuda in order to avoid examination, delay, and possible seizure of American mail. This situation is a loss of prestige, as well as of safety to our airships and seems a weakness on the part of arrangements by our Government, and an assent to autocratic arrogance from a foreign nation we have worked to aid.

We helped the aggrandizement of Great Britain in the last war—a participation which President Coolidge said would cost us "one hundred-billion dollars" besides our dead, our war cripples, and two decades of post-war unsettlement. We cannot do this every 20 years without practical, realistic territorial or economic advantage to our own country! We received "more kicks than hapence" the last time. That is all "interference" ever gets.

Gratitude is short-lived with nations. We must cut out emotionalism and hysteria and get these islands now—while the getting is good! Uncle Sam's family should not give "something for nothing" all the time!

If Washington and Hamilton, who participated in the first great President's Farewell Address, or the Jefferson of the Louisiana Purchase, or Cleveland, or the first Roosevelt, were in power today with this question before them—how long would those islands, in this situation of disadvantage and anxiety, remain in any foreign hands?

Whether these islands are now acquired in satisfaction in whole or part of defaulted war debts, or bought for price, or obtained by other methods, they should be acquired, for now and forever by the United States. Get also the Caribbean bases! But get these islands permanently for our own Nation, regardless of sentimental objectors, or of "Sixth Columnists" who are more fond of some other country than their own.

You Never Can Tell

IT HAPPENED in Hawaii, where anything can happen, and does! I was en route to Hauula, 31 miles from Honolulu to visit Sacred Falls, reputed haunt of Kamapua, the ancient pig-god. I had traveled as far as Kahuku on the Honolulu Railroad, from which point I was to proceed by cane-train in the leisurely manner of these refreshing isles. Kahuku is a plantation town set in rolling seas of pale green sugarcane.

Intent on finding out if I had time to call on a friend before train time, I sought the stationmaster. I found that genial native gentleman leaning nonchalantly against the depot watching a Chinese trying to persuade a small gray donkey up an inclined plank into a cane-car.

The donkey would not walk the plank. Pulling him head first and pushing him tail first availed nothing. Finally, the Chinaman turned him around and tried to pull him up again. The little beast resisted. His sweating master pulled harder and the halter rope broke. The Chinese fell backward into the car, the donkey stayed on the plank. Feet braced, he emitted a raucous bray, as his master emerged, furious.

"No come-y, no go-ey. Too muchee stoppee!" he sputtered, belaboring the poor animal.

He plucked a stalk of juicy cane from beside the narrow gauge track, strode over and held it temptingly in front of the burro's nose, backing into the car. The donkey followed docilely lured on by the sweet morsel.

I suddenly remembered my errand. "What time does the train leave for Hauula?" I inquired.

He spat reflectively. "Why, lady, he just leave when,—well, when she get ready." His reckless disregard of gender was delicious.

"When," I suggested, "do you think it will leave? Today?"

"Maybe two t'irty."

"Thank you," I smiled. "I'll sit on this box and wait." There would be no time to visit my Scotch friend.

"You go where, lady?"

"To Sacred Falls."

"Bad place, Miss. Not good to go. Man kill up dere las' month."

"How did it happen?"

The old man removed his high-crowned lauhala hat and fanned his whiskers slowly. "He no could move. Kamapua no like stranger messing around hees falls."

"You mean," I asked, incredulously, "that Kamapua paralyzed him?"

"Maybe so, maybe no."

"But you said he couldn't move."

"No," sighed the old native sorrowfully, picking his teeth with a sliver of cane, "he no move."

"Why not?"

"Da rock on top of heem.'

"I see," I said, faintly, getting up from my box. "It's 2:30. Where is the train?"

I looked up and down the track. There was no train. He looked at his capacious hat. But, unlike Houdini, he could not pull trains out of it.

"She go at t'ree, I t'ink. Or sometime four. No worry, lady."

I sat down again. "Are you sure it is going today at all?" I asked.

"I no know, ma'am. You nevah can tell about dat train. It no like schedule."

"Well!" I gasped. "Where will it stop when it does come in?"

"She in now."

A careful survey disclosed no train.

"Right dere, lady, dat car. Dat's heem." He waved at the diminutive cane-car. It was almost low enough for me to have placed my hand on top of it.

"That? But—but the donkey's in there," I objected.

"Sure, lady. Back half, baggage; front half, passenger," he elucidated.

"Oh." I said. "But what makes it go?"

"Da engine, ma'am."

"I don't see any engine. Are you sure there's an engine?"

"Yis, ma'am. There's an engine."

"Where?" I demanded.

He scratched his grizzled white head apologetically. "Well, lady, dat engine, it—it" (a happy solution struck him) "you see, it's lunch time" he explained.

This important point settled, I hunted up my friend, who lived in sight of the depot, returning at 10 to 3. The car, still engineless, was taking on passengers. I climbed aboard, with the Chinaman and a sprinkling of cane hands, and took a seat in front of the low partition that walled off passengers from livestock. Something cold touched my neck, and the Chinaman's donkey laid its nose in friendly fashion on my shoulder! Hastily I changed seats with the Chinese.

Presently came a tremendous puffing outside. The "engine" had arrived, garrulous as a bantam rooster. While it was being coupled on, the station master's eyes met mine anxiously through the window.

"Better you no go, lady," he insisted, dolorously.

"Nothing will happen to me," I assured him.

"You nevah can tell," he warned solemnly. "Kamapua no like."

He shook his head and called, "All aboard!" There was a neck-cracking jolt, a startled "hee!" (the "haw" got jerked in two), and we were off!

As you may have guessed, Kamapua did not roll a rock down on me, in spite of the station master's dire predictions.

Favors Debate

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt seems to think (and he has strongly intimated as much) that he himself should be reelected to a third term, for the continued welfare of the country, and that the election of Willkie would prove a calamity.

If he really does think so, it seems that he should be willing to debate such a weighty situation with Mr. Willkie, and not pass the buck to others. Many think that the continued welfare of the country, and especially of its present form of government, is in more danger from F. D. R. than it is from Hitler. It's up to the President to prove otherwise.

A joint debate, especially in the open air, would certainly be popular and draw tremendous crowds to hear it. Besides, there would be less mud-slinging. Lincoln thus debated with Douglas, and won out.

Matsuoka's Purge

Tokyo Looks To New Brooms

YOSUKE MATSUOKA'S purge of the Japanese foreign service, announced on Thursday, was scarcely a bolt from the blue. Knowing that new diplomatic brooms, like their kitchen counterparts, sweep well, political observers have been predicting the reshuffle for the past three weeks.

There were two features of the purge, however, that sent shivers down the spine of official Washington. Firstly, it was carried out under Matsuoka's unorthodox "no toadying before Occidentals" policy. As such, it appeared to be a demonstration of Tokyo's newly kindled xenophobia.

Secondly, Kensuke Horinouchi, the moderate, well-liked Japanese Ambassador to the United States, was to be replaced by a member of the new ultranationalist cabal. The name persistently mentioned on Friday for the Washington post was that of Yoshisuke Aikawa, one of Japan's most aggressive empire builders.

No better illustration of the startling change effected in the Japanese government in mid-July could be found than in a contrast between Horinouchi and Aikawa. Take a look at them.

ALTHOUGH relatively young—he is but 54 years of age—Horinouchi is a diplomat of the "old school." He saw service in Washington, London, Paris and Peiping, did his job well, and managed to sail through a particularly stormy decade without acquiring that verbose belligerence which the Japanese army rates so highly.

A Japanese publicist once described him as—to use the translator's exact wording—"not flashy but a steady chap." He has been what an ambassador should be: a mouthpiece of his government, a gatherer of information and a builder of goodwill.

Horinouchi's greatest handicap was that he succeeded Mr. Hiroshi Saito. Saito had a deep, perhaps intuitive knowledge of the American mind. Although well acquainted with the United States, Horinouchi lacked Saito's perception and ability to approach the Americans on their own ground.

To quote the Japanese publicist again: "Although in general appearance Mr. Horinouchi may enjoy an advantage over Mr. Saito, he lacks the latter's pep and vivacity. And it is pep and vivacity which attract the American people.

Perhaps, Mr. Horinouchi would have been more suitable as Ambassador to London . . . but to his credit it must be said that he has kept American sentiment from growing worse . . . He is like a piece of silver, dulled by age and not flashy, but quite valuable nevertheless."

Increasingly for the past year, Mr. Horinouchi has been finding himself out of tune with the new spirit and the new masters in Japan. He had been kept on by sucessive cabinets for lack of a similarly equipped jingoist. But it was certain that sooner or later he would forfeit his official head to the new ultra-nationalism.

AIKAWA, on the other hand, is the personification of the new Japan. Although old in age—he is sixty—he has managed to be the civilian darling of the jingoist "younger officers" and has contributed his share to Japan's imperial expansion.

Soon after the Russo-Japanese war of 1904-05, Aikawa went to the United States to learn the steel business. He remained in this country for three years, and spent much time as a common laborer in steel mills. When he returned to Japan, Aikawa knew the industry from the bottom up.

Although the first unit of his combine, the Tobata Foundry, was launched in 1910, it was not until the late 'twenties that Aikawa began to achieve fame. In direct opposition to the Big Three—the Mitsui, Mitsubishi and Sumitomo super-trusts—he began to pyramid industrial and insurance enterprises.

When the Japanese army struck in Manchuria in 1931, Aikawa was already the most important of the lesser "robber barons." In his work, he displayed a spectacular daring, worthy of Wall Street's greatest plungers. His Nissan industrial combine alone was capitalized at 250,000,000 yen, and the total capitalization he controlled probably exceeded half a billion yen.

The Manchurian adventure gave a new boost to his enterprise. The answer to this was threefold. Firstly, Aikawa had concentrated his attention on the heavy industry, for which war is blessing. Secondly, the army—and especially the Kwantung army in Manchuria—did not like the conservative and cautious Big Three and threw business Aikawa's way whenever it could; thirdly, Aikawa had already established close ties with the men whom intense jingoism was later to carry into power.

In 1937, when the Kwantung army decided to divest the South Manchuria Railway Co. of its industrial branches, it was Aikawa to whom it turned with an invitation to head the new immense industrial monopoly.

Aikawa happily agreed, and made his Nissan concern the nucleus of the 400,000,000 yen Manchuria Industrial Development Co. It was at this time that Aikawa first came into close contact with Matsuoka. The latter, as president of the South Manchuria Railway Co., did not relish the thought of giving up to a newcomer the vast industrial empire he had personally built up. But then, the Kwantung army was in no mood for argument, and Matsuoka himself harbored a secret ambition to become the economic czar of newly conquered North China. The ambition came to naught, and Matsuoka resigned from his railway concern in 1939, to retire to his mansion in Tokyo and nurse his grudge.

AIKAWA, meanwhile, took over Matsuoka's mantle as the leading Japanese civilian empire builder. Under his energetic direction, the heavy industries of Manchuria mushroomed and their output soared. And when a shortage of capital developed, Aikawa turned to America—with fair initial results.

Last year, however, he was compelled to give up his announced plans for a loan-seeking visit to the United States. Despite a very expensive campaign of publicity, which included the "purchase" of an entire issue of a leading American economic publication, no banking house displayed any yearning to invest in Manchuria. Rather than face a fiasco, Aikawa stayed home.

Aikawa is a carbon copy of Matsuoka. He is a big businessman in politics. He is aggressive, ambitious and intensely nationalistic. He is the product of that school of Japanese thought which stands for pushing the Occidental trader, shipper and educator out of the Orient with one hand and beckoning the Occidental banker with the other. Japan's "new order in East Asia" has no place for Western commercial or shipping rivals. But it definitely requires foreign loans to finance its program of rearmament and conquest.

Tokyo's new policy toward the United States—the policy of Matsuoka and Aikawa—will be to tempt this country with bids of economic "cooperation." Japan, they will say, is merely doing in Asia what Washington is striving to do in this hemisphere. There is no real conflict of interest between Japan and the United States, and the latter can just as well benefit by Japan's program by timely—and generous—investments.

AIKAWA'S job, if appointed Ambassador, will be to lull American opposition to Japan's southward expansion by talk of business—and, perhaps, unsubtle reminders that with things as they are in Europe, Washington can ill afford to antagonize Japan.

Together with Horinouchi, two other able diplomats will leave posts in this country. Kaname Wakasugi and Hiroshi Acino, Consuls general in New York and Chicago, have also been swept out of office. These two men, like Horinouchi, are "old school" officials, whose moderation is no longer in fashion.

Both have served in China in the trying years that followed the invasion of Manchuria, and both have displayed a rare capacity for compromise. Many foreign businessmen and correspondents found them helpful in tight spots.

For Wakasugi especially, the recall will be a hard blow, for he was being groomed for an ambassadorship. A graduate of the Law School of University of Oregon—which was also Matsuoka's alma mater—and of New York University, Wakasugi saw service in Los Angeles, San Francisco, London, China and Manchuria. If he is not retired, his promotion will probably be retarded.

Washington will not relish all these changes. From now on, it will be pitted against ruthless, aggressive men, ably defending—or smoke-screening—a ruthless, aggressive foreign policy.

Yesterday, Japan's diplomacy was in the hands of diplomats. Today, it is to be handled by ultra-nationalist propagandists, and the change bodes no good for the vast American interests in East Asia.

Sacredness Of Wealth

AS I EXPECTED, a lot of people have been shocked by the apparent brutality of my proposition that while it is not undemocratic to conscript human beings for military service, nevertheless, democracy must die if and when mere bloodless wealth is conscripted, too.

The objections seem to me to be emotional protests against an exasperating reality which is no invention of mine, for no man can get around, over or under the fact that in every country where wealth has been conscripted or confiscated the people have lost everything which Americans would defend. Or have I overlooked some country in which the effect did not follow the cause? Don't cite Britain, please, because the results there have not jelled as yet.

A man who has no material wealth of his own worth counting is almost certain to resent the suggestion that in case of war his life may be placed at risk by command of the Government while the wealth of Henry Ford, for example, must be respected and protected. That certainly is a mean state of affairs, but, still, if the Nation should take Ford's property, then it should take the property of every other man.

THE GOVERNMENT thus would become the only employer in the country and the boss and ruler of all labor. All our eminent unioneers, except the Communists and Nazi-Fascists, agree that total government control of labor, enforced by law, is fatal to freedom, amounting, as it does, to conscription of labor.

Our unioneers even resent the suggestion that the Government should impose some supervision of the elections and finances of unions for the protection of the rank and file members, and I will be fair enough to grant that they are not altogether concerned with the protection of the graft and power which flow from these funds to union leaders.

I think they are also honestly apprehensive that a small degree of Government authority would expand into total control by a Government department. And a Government department as tough, arbitrary and cruel as these labor organizations have been in many of their dealings with workers, and with the power of the Federal law behind its decisions, would murder liberty.

IF, BY CONSCRIPTION, you have in mind the idea that the Government should "take over" certain essential works for the duration of the emergency, we might be able to work out a rough understanding. In that case the owners and the unioneers both would have to play ball with the Government. The owners would have to be content with a little return on their money and the unions would have to rock along and compromise some points of dispute and yield on others. But that wouldn't be real conscription.

Real conscription of wealth would require the conscription of labor to work the properties, because when a man is given to understand that he is not entitled to keep for his own benefit what he earns by his work, which is to say his wealth, he just lays to hell with it and won't work a lick. So at that point we look into the big files on classifications and skills and draft or conscript men to work—or else—at occupations assigned to them by the Government. That has been the way in Russia, Italy and Germany, and there has been no mention of any special or peculiar condition arising from the soil or inhaled with the air of the United States which would enable us to find some better solution.

GOVERNMENT BONDS and postal savings are wealth, the conscription or confiscation of which would amount to a flat repudiation of the Government's debts, and that fact, embarrassing as it is to those who think liberty can live where wealth is conscripted, will not be vanquished by mere indignation or scorn.

We have heard so much about the creation of so-and-so many thousands millionaires in the last war that I would like to know also how many of those fortunes still exist intact, either in the hands of original possessors or in the hands of their heirs. I suspect that many of them were only tablecloth or, at least, temporary millionaires, whose money soon got away, as quick as easy money usually does. And a few thousand fresh war millionaires, offensive as their airs and manners might be, whose fortunes almost inevitably would wash back into circulation, would do much less harm and vanish sooner than the results of conscription or confiscation of wealth.

This is not a proposition of lives versus dollars. Lives are not opposed to dollars, or vice versa.

The National Interest

Anglo-American Cooperation

THE PEOPLE who jump to extreme conclusions have been heavily responsible for holding back sensible measures of cooperation between Great Britain and the United States for the promotion of their mutual interests.

Great Britain offers to lease to us naval and air facilities in the Western Hemisphere. It is published that we are about to make available to Great Britain, directly or through Canada, about 50 of our over-age destroyers.

What happens?

An unidentified official or semi-official spokesman says the British are seeking an alliance with us. A former member of the British cabinet predicts that the Anglo-American alliance is just around the corner.

On our side, various citizens jump to similar conclusions. Some favor our entry into the war as a full belligerent now. Others fear that we will be sucked in by these transactions.

What were intended to be specific undertakings for mutual benefit become enshrouded in false hopes and suspicions.

The leasing of base facilities in the Western Hemisphere is mutually beneficial. It it not of much benefit, perhaps, to the United Kingdom, but it is to Canada and Newfoundland and the smaller British colonies in this hemisphere. If the British fleet goes down, these portions of the empire become dependent on us for most of their protection. We cannot protect them unless we have adequate bases.

THE TRANSFER of our over-age destroyers also should be mutually beneficial. If they enable Britain to frustrate a German invasion or to run essential supplies through the German blockade, they will be serving our national interest. We will gain time, at least, in building up our own defenses. And if the tide of war turns eventually in favor of Great Britain we may be spared part of the heavy burden of armament which now seems to be essential for our national safety.

Nobody can guarantee, of course, that 50 destroyers, or even 100 destroyers, will save Great Britain or measurably prolong its resistance. The war may be lost in the air. In that event neither Great Britain nor ourselves will benefit specifically from a destroyer transfer. But if Britain does benefit, so will we.

On the whole, we gain more from the leasing of bases, and they stand to gain more from a destroyer transfer. But there are potential benefits for both in each of the transactions.

IT IS A PRODIGIOUS LEAP, however, from such specific arrangements for common benefit to an alliance. We have interests, cold-blooded as well as sentimental, in the survival of Great Britain, but it is not essential to our national existence. We have interests, economic and military, in parts of the British empire, but not in others. The British have all sorts of commitments—including the restoration of Poland—in which we are not importantly concerned.

Naturally the British will do everything possible to bring us into the war on their side. But the better informed British statesmen and diplomats know better than to expect this to happen. They realize that the American people, and many of their political leaders, think more strictly in terms of national interest than they did in 1917. They know that British policy in the post-war period forfeited all claims on the United States for aid, except that which we grant for the furthering of our own purposes. They expect us to act now as Great Britain and other great powers have always acted: in accordance with a cool, even if mistaken, appraisal of national interest.

The transactions now pending, however, do not exhaust the possibilities for Anglo-American collaboration. If the British navy had a few battleships and accompanying craft to send to Singapore, a joint naval policy with respect to Japan would become feasible. A long-distance blockade of Japan has been thoroughly studied by our naval experts and is regarded as entirely practicable if a suitable force is based on Singapore to work with our naval power reaching out from Hawaii.

IF GREAT BRITAIN loses Gibraltar but holds England, a mutual interest may soon be apparent in preventing excursions by the Axis in the direction of South America. The British base at Freetown, on the bulge of Africa, will immediately become more important.

If Great Britain is overrun but the British Empire fights on, a broad understanding would immediately become essential. For Canada would then become the main base of British power. The war could be continued by the British Empire only as we granted our approval and perhaps augmented our assistance. But obviously it is in our vital interest that if Great Britain is overrun, the British navy in the Atlantic should fall back on the Western Hemisphere. Twice, Prime Minister Churchill has declared that if the worse comes to worst the British navy must enable the empire to be protected and to carry on the war. Obviously, it is to our advantage that a government committed to this policy should be encouraged, so that it will not easily be overthrown by one which might surrender the British fleet or make other concessions injurious to our interests.

The future may bring Anglo-American naval collaboration far beyond the transactions now pending. But the surest progress can be made by examining each situation as it arises, not by proclaiming that two and two make 100.

Leaders Expect Draft Bill to Pass

pay the costs of military training.

Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, the Democratic leader, yesterday told reporters he would offer an amendment to the draft bill—on which the Senate is scheduled to begin its twelfth day of debate today—to authorize an appropriation.

If this amendment is adopted, Barkley said, the way will be cleared for inclusion of the funds in the pending $5,008,000,000 defense appropriation bill. Congressional rules do not permit an appropriation unless a specific authorization previously has been voted.

May Agree on Date Limit

The defense appropriation measure is scheduled to be taken up by the Senate after it acts, probably late this week, on the conscription legislation.

[Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, isolationist leader, has indicated it might be possible to reach an agreement today to limit Senate debate on the Burke-Wadsworth bill, the United Press reported. Barkley failed in such an attempt last week.]

Barkley would not estimate the amount of money needed to start the conscription program but most Senators believed immediate requests would be far less than the $1,000,000,000 which some have predicted the program would cost in this fiscal year.

The Democratic leader said it was his opinion that the Army ought to go ahead with the preliminaries of setting up the registration program as soon as possible, although it could not actually begin operations until funds became available. The measure calls for registration of all men 21 to 30 years of age. Men to be trained would be selected from this group by lot.

Predicts G. O. P. Support

As the bill now stands, there is no limitation on the number of men who may be trained. This is left to the discretion of the President.

Senator Austin, of Vermont, acting minority leader and a supporter of the Burke-Wadsworth bill, said that there was strong Republican support for a limitation.

He predicted that most Republicans would vote for an amendment by Senator White (Republican), Maine, providing that only the number of men for whose training funds had been specifically voted could be inducted into the Army. This, Austin said, would serve as a practical check by Congress on the size of the conscript army.

A pending amendment by Senator Lodge (Republican), Massachusetts, would fix the number to be trained at 800,000. This proposal probably will come to a vote today as the Senate agreed Saturday to limit debate on the amendment to 15 minutes for each Senator who wished to speak.

Senator Barkley told his colleagues he favored an amendment by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, setting the number of trainees in service at any one time at 1,000,000.

With most observers predicting a final Senate vote on the conscription legislation by Friday, at the latest, the House Military Affairs Committee marked time on its own version of the Burke-Wadsworth bill. Members said that before they acted they wanted to see what form of the measure was finally approved by the Senate. It was indicated that their bill might be made to conform to that of the Senate.

The national emergency committee of the Military Training Camps Association yesterday made public telegrams from seven church leaders indorsing compulsory selective service.

The telegrams, to be placed in the record of Congressional hearings on the Burke-Wadsworth bill, were signed by William Church Osborn, president of the Temple of Religion, New York World's Fair; the Most Rev. James H. Ryan, R. C., bishop of Omaha; the Right Rev. Cammeron J. Davis, Episcopal bishop of Western New York; the Right Rev. William T. Manning, Episcopal bishop of New York, and the Right Rev. W. Bertrand Stevens, bishop of Los Angeles.

The Once Over

The War By Radio

Dear Ed:

Well, I been following the war almost a year now by listening to radio broadcasts, and all I can make out is that it is a gigantic struggle between the breakfast food, nickel cigar, hair tonic, railroad watch, ice cream, salad oil, savings bank and soap interests.

I thought it was a fight between philosophies and systems, but what I mean is that you could never prove it to me by what comes out of my radio set. I have spent the whole of 1940 listening to the radio war news, and as the situation now stands the Nazis are better off in coconut-covered confectionery and part-Havana-leaf stogies, while the democracies are ahead in point of scalp oils, stop watches and the breakfast food that has four vitamins, from what I can grasp.

You wrote me that your radio has been on the bum and would I tell you what has been going on, so I am glad to give you my impression. Last night I hear that the Greek dictator, some fellow named Bounds, has had a conference with three Turkish leaders rich in proteins, headed by Meatena, over the sinking of a couple of Greek ships named Vim and Vigor. It looks like Greece may be taken over and divided between the Tastee Gum Drop alliance and the Open a Checking Account with Us For Any Sum from a Dollar Up bunch.

There is not much new from Africa. Mussolini has took Fruity Bars, Blue Owl and Fair Humor by direct assault, but the British are holding onto the Smoothier and Glossier Hair Area, and Berlin is remaining aloof. I don't know whether it is aloof of white or rye. The thing to watch is whether the British lose the pure and delicious Suez Canal, which is rich in those qualities what gives you energy and ambition and a clear complexion, on sale at all leading drug stores, but pretty vulnerable from the air.

I don't seem to make much out of the situation in France. Petain, the marshal with that rich, creamy quality, has named a court to try six Frenchmen and a whopping stick of chocolate that comes in three sizes. The French government would like to leave Vichy and the watch that is the official timepiece of 11 railroads and move back to Paris and the soup that comes in 11 flavors at 10 cents a can. I don't know what will come of it all on account of I use a dollar watch and do not care for soup except vegetable, home made.

Personally, I think the situation is very confused and that no good will come of it for us, no matter what we smoke or eat, but I think Congress should stop stalling and pass a conscription law which has at least Vitamin C in it. I also favor letting England have 50 full-flavored destroyers and a case of Meatena in return for Bermuda, a year's supply of Dr. Whozis's Tooth Powder and any good peach-nut ice cream. Yours,

LUKE.

Joint Defense

By Barnet Nover

The U. S., Canada And Britain

THE AIR BASE which the United States is about to acquire in Bermuda is the first of such strategic outposts on British territory in this hemisphere which the Churchill government has agreed to make available to this Nation. There will be others, the number depending entirely on the wishes of the United States.

The value to our defense system of such a chain of new bases extending all the way from Newfoundland to Trinidad and Guiana can hardly be overestimated. They will greatly extend the range and effectiveness of the American fleet and air force and, together with existing bases in the Caribbean, provide additional protection for the Panama Canal.

BUT WHILE this fact is generally understood and appreciated, alarm has been expressed regarding the possible political implications of such an arrangement between the United States and Great Britain. It is feared in some quarters that Britain's generosity, while ostensibly without strings attached to it, hides the Machiavellian purpose of entangling us in the war.

The argument has thus been advanced that it would be much better for our purposes to acquire Britain's island possessions in this hemisphere outright, by purchase or otherwise. Those who argue in this fashion, however, ignore the human aspects of the problem. After all, the British West Indies are not uninhabited, and most of them have been under British rule for a long time. To treat them as chattels would offend the best instincts of the British people and profoundly disturb the inhabitants of the colonies themselves.

It is revealing in this connection that the Bermuda Assembly, in its memorial to the British government, warmly disapproved any possible change in the status of the colony. Moreover, so far as the United States is concerned the contemplated arrangement will undoubtedly involve far less trouble and expense than would outright possession of the British colonial areas that posess strategic importance to us. In Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands we have two "effective poorhouses," to cite former President Hoover's phrase. We don't need any more.

UNDOUBTEDLY one factor behind the British government's willingness to make naval and air bases available to us in Britain's colonial possessions on this side of the Atlantic is its eagerness to win our good will. But that does not tell the whole story by any means.

It is a significant fact that Great Britain does not possess in this hemisphere any counterpart of Gibraltar, Malta, Alexandria, Aden, Singapore or Hongkong. British naval bases in North America are antiquated and inadequate.

The reason for this state of affairs is twofold. In the first place the construction of a British naval base in this hemisphere would have created suspicions in the United States regarding Britain's intentions. Great Britain has been anxious to avoid such supicions. Moreover, there was no need for such modern bases in view of the fact that the British areas in North America were not menaced. They were protected against attack by a European power both by the British fleet and the Monroe Doctrine.

THE SITUATION is now threatened with a fundamental alteration. There is no longer any certainty that the British fleet will remain the powerful factor in international affairs it has been these many decades. There is a possibility that it may disappear altogether. There are also real doubts whether, under existing circumstances, the United States is in a position by itself alone to implement the Monroe Doctrine.

It is obvious, therefore, that both from the viewpoint of British and of American interests the establishment of an effective system of hemisphere defense is necessary.

Such a system would not only permit the perpetuation of British sovereignty in the West Indies, Newfoundland, British Guiana and British Honduras but, what is of far greater importance, safeguard the security of Canada as well. For this reason the Anglo-American discussions regarding the acquisition by the United States of naval and air bases on British colonial territory in North America is the corollary of the Ogdensburg Accord between Canada and the United States.

It cannot be denied that at Bermuda, for instance, and anywhere else on British soil in this hemisphere where American naval bases are established a joint policy of defense will be the consequence. But that definitely comes within the meaning and intention of the Monroe Doctrine. And the task of implementing the arrangement will fall entirely on this Nation.

RECENT EVENTS have brought home to the American people the extent to which the destinies of the United States and the British Empire are interlocked. That is true in the Far East. It has been and remains true in this hemisphere. We are also beginning to realize that despite our professed indifference to what happens across the Atlantic it has also been true in Europe. That is why it is impossible to ignore the fact that the outcome of the Battle of Britain will have far-reaching consequences not only to the people of the United Kingdom and of the British Empire but to us as well.

Culberson Wins Texas Railroad Board Nomination

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 25 (AP).—Olin Culberson, of Edna, defeated Pierce Brooks for the Democratic nomination for railroad commissioner in yesterday's primary runoff.

In the only other runoff for a State office, James P. Alexander, of Waco, won the nomination for chief justice of the Supreme Court from H. S. Lattimore, of Fort Worth.

Democratic nomination is tantamount to election in Texas.

The tabulation, with less than 25,000 votes out, gave Culberson 451,503 to 405,203 for Brooks, and Alexander 431,518, to 392,623.

Culberson will succeed Chairman Lon Smith on the three-member commission which regulates the Texas oil industry.

Sam Russell, of Stephenville, and Eugene Worley, of Shamrock, appeared to have won Congressional seats.

Russell led Representative Clyde Garrett, of Eastland, 26,307 to 24,096 votes, in the Seventh District. Worley was ahead of H. D. Wells, of Welington, 28,472 to 21,282, for the Eighteenth District seat vacated by Marvin Jones, named a judge of the United States Court of Claims.

All other incumbents won in the first primary.

Gay, Informal Parties Mark Summer's Ebb

Official Entertaining Over for Season, But Small Affairs Prove Fun; Maj. and Mrs. Frank Allen Give Dinner

"Washington is a wonderful summer resort," remarked someone the other day. It's perfectly true, for even though official entertaining ceases, the people who are left still see a lot of each other at small informal affairs, which are a lot more pleasant, anyway.

Yesterday there were several gatherings on the calendar. It's safe to guess that the war was the chief topic of discussion at the dinner given by Maj. and Mrs. Frank Allen at their home in Arlington. Representative James Wadsworth was the ranking guest. Coauthor with Senator Burke of the conscription bill, he is pretty much in the limelight now.

Others present at this party included the Deputy Chief of Staff, Maj. Gen. William Bryden, and Mrs. Bryden, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. John Herr, Col. and Mrs. L. W. L. Oliver, Mrs. J. J. Bohn, Mrs. P. D. Hopkins and Edward Gamble.

Sherry McAdams Fetes Younger Set

A younger crowd motored out to Sherry McAdams' house in the country yesterday for lunch and baseball. He has been entertaining in this informal fashion on Sundays throughout the summer.

Later many of the same group gathered at Dolly Coribn's house for cocktails. Miss Corbin and her younger sister, Edythe, have just done over one of the rooms in their house on Wyoming avenue as a bar, and the opening of this was observed yesterday with due ceremony. The room was pronounced a great success, with its Spanish decoration and welcome sign, "Esta es su casa" (This is your house).

The hostess had originally planned to have the guests spill out into the garden, but rain prevented it.

Seen here and there: Lieut. and Mrs. Nathaniel Dial, who motored over from Annapolis to visit the Corbins this week-end; Dr. Charles Bruce, of New York, who is staying with them; Miss Katherine Fechet, telling friends of her grand new job with the Mellon Gallery, and Baron James Baeyens and Charles Lucet, who are holding the fort at the French Embassy while most of the staff is on vacation.

The men outnumbered the women, as is usual in summer Washington. Commander William D. Thomas, Angus Malcolm, Mannix Walker, William Ryan and Judson Bowles were among the bachelors.

Other guests included Senor and Senora de Echegaray, of the Spanish Embassy; Julie Kelley, who is studying for the foreign service; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dewell, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Downes, Miss Ruth Overton, Miss Helen Summerlin and Mrs. Mary Stewart Funston.

Arthur D. Condons Hosts at Picnic

Mrs. Condon, the only woman delegate from the District of Columbia at the recent Democratic convention, has been selected to represent District Democrats on the committee to notify Henry A. Wallace, Vice Presidential nominee. She will leave by plane Wednesday for Des Moines to attend the ceremonies on Friday.

Upon her return here Mrs. Condon and her husband will go to their farm on the Patuxent River to spend September.

THE COMING WEEK-END will be one of the gayest of the season in the hunt country, as guests pour in for the many festivities—debutante parties, dinners, horse shows and even a dedication! This last takes place on Saturday, when a statue of Gen. Stonewall Jackson will be dedicated on the Manassas Battlefield.

The first large party of the week is the dance to be given on Friday by Mr. and Mrs. Moncure Nelson Lyon for their debutante daughter, Miss Betty Lyon. The party will take place at their home, Black Oak Ridge, near Purcellville, and debutantes from many cities have been asked. The following evening, Saturday, Miss Charlotte Noland will entertain at Foxcroft for her attractive debutante niece, Miss Katherine Powell Noland Smith, daughter of the Edmund Smiths, of Baltimore.

The show will be held Monday, Labor Day, as well as Saturday, and there will be dozens of parties.

DURING THE RECESS hour of the Warrenton show, on Saturday, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Shirley Turner, of Middleburg, will have a complete dispersal sale of their horses. Louis Merryman will handle it, setting up in the show ring on the grounds with about 30 horses on the block from noon until 2.

Also selling horses then will be William Elmslie, of Washington; Dr. Lewis M. Allen, of Winchester and Berryville; Capt. Richard Kirkpatrick, of Warrenton, and William Crouch, of Aldie.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

NEWEST ARRIVAL at the French Embassy is Herve Alfond, who will have the post of financial attache with headquarters in New York. It is an example of the international shuffling that goes on nowadays that M. Alfond is changing exact posts with his predecessor, Paul Leroy-Beaulieu. The former French financial attache has left for Vichy, where he will assume the job of director of commercial treaties—the same job which M. Alfond had before coming to America.

The two diplomats are friends of long standing but were unable to catch a glimpse of one another, even though they did the New York-Vichy trip by Clipper in opposite directions at the same time. Their paths crossed, but did not meet.

M. ALFOND is the brother of charming Marie-Vic Charpentier, whose husband, Pierre Charpentier, was a secretary at the French Embassy when M. Bonnett was Ambassador. The Charpentiers left Washington soon after the departure of the Bonnets and the hoards of friends who regretted their departure will be ready to welcome this equally attractive member of the family.

Lunching with Baron James Baeyens the other day, M. Alfond commented that it had taken him 12 days to get from Vichy to Washington and at that he had flown wherever possible. He said that diplomats must travel light these days and that he had brought only two small suitcases, with one more to follow by boat.

He brought news that the Charpentiers are safe in Vichy and he asked many questions about his sister's sojourn in Washington, which house had she lived in, had people liked her, etc.

The new French Ambassador, Henri Haye, is expected about September 15 and there will probably be a few other changes in the Embassy. Popular Guy dal Piaz and his charming little wife will return to New York, where he was connected with the French Line before joining the office of the French Naval Attache here.

AND, SPEAKING of changes, the Baeyens have changed houses and are living in Georgetown. The new house has a beautiful garden and lawn in back of it which is reached through a great open porch or through the little library. Besides M. Alfond, among the guests taking coffee in the garden after lunch were Robert Pell of the State Department, the Counselor of the French Embassy, Jacques Truelle; the Air Attache, Col. Rene Weiser, and Guy dal Piaz.

Mrs. Higginson Rogers, who has spent most of the summer at her house in Georgetown, has left for a visit to the North Shore accompanied by one of her pretty daughters.

THE MINISTER of Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitch, who have occupied the house of Robert Pell in Virginia during July and August, will go to Rehoboth Beach September 1. Mme. Fotitch spent the month of June at Rehoboth and says that she must get in her pre and postseason stays every year; there is no crowd then and the beach is so lovely.

The Minister has just returned to the Capital from a visit to Hibbing, Minn., where there are a great many Yugoslavs working the greatest open iron mine in the world. The iron is on top of the ground and is just scooped up. One can stand on the rim of the excavation and watch the whole process.

The mine is incredibly rich and the war has stepped up production, of course. The little town of 12,000 inhabitants had to be moved a few years ago because the company owning the mine discovered that the mineral deposit ran right under the heart of it. What with the compensation for moving and the taxes it takes from the mining company, Hibbing is probably the richest town of its size in the world.

To instruct the youth of the town, Hibbing has built a model high school, considered on par with similar institutions in New York or Chicago. There is a first-class zoo.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion in clematis and ivy with numbers of tall white candles casting a soft light on the scene.

The finger-tip tulle veil was held in place with a tiara of pearls, and her flowers were white roses with a center of gardenias.

Miss Louise Case, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. She wore a white-flowered blue organdie, fashioned with a long full skirt and short puffed sleeves. Her headdress was matching ribbons, which extended below the waistline in the back, and her flowers were pink roses and blue delphiniums.

The bridesmaids were Miss Jeanne Delvaux, of Glasgow, Ky.; Miss Jean Osborne, of Princeton, W. Va.; Miss Jane Rogers, Hamilton, Va., and Miss Mary Jo Eppes, Purcellville. Misses Delvaux and Rogers wore white-flowered pink organdie, and Miss Osborne and Miss Eppes wore white-flowered green organdie. Their costumes were fashioned like the maid of honor with matching headdress and similar flowers.

Scott Jessee, of Newport News, Va., brother of the bridegroom, was the best man, and the ushers were George Case, of Purcellville; Eddie Case, of Hamilton, brother of the bride; Dalton Musick and Herbert Marcy, of Bristol, Va.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, when the bridal party was assisted in receiving by the bride's mother in blue chiffon with navy accessories, and the bridegroom's mother in navy blue sheer. Miss Pat Mayes, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Miss Pat Kelley, of Richlands, Va., and Miss Betsy Rogers, of Hamilton, Va., also assisted.

Fall Hoods of Wool, Silk, and Fur Provide Decoration and Comfort

The younger set is taking to hoods this fall in a big way and this comfortable vogue promises to go on into winter. At left is Margaret Di Rosa, Washington girl, who snuggles closely into a hooded opossum jacket which frames her sleek hairdress becomingly and also keeps out the cold winds.

Troubled by Devoted Suitor's Smaller Stature, Girl Kept Him Guessing Until He Got Engaged To Another; Now She Wants Him; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Two years ago, while living in another city, I went with a man five years my senior. I learned to like him very much and I know he liked me even more. He has wonderful creative ability, and he can turn almost any subject into fascinating conversational material. Also, he is the Good Samaritan type—always doing a good deed for someone else.

During most of the two years we went together, he continually hinted at marriage, but never actually proposed. And there was just one thing that kept me from giving him a "lead." It was the fact that he is smaller than I, and I was afraid that all my life I would feel self-conscious with him.

When I left that city to take a job here, he cried. In fact, every time I went away, he was the one most desolated. He really is a very sentimental person . . . The last time I saw him, I broke down (for the first time since I've known him) and told him that I loved him and would marry him. Then he asked why I hadn't given him some inkling of my feelings before. Rather than tell him the real reason (about his height), I said that I hadn't been sure of my feelings, so, rather than hurt him, I took the chance of hurting myself.

Then he explained that after I had left town he had joined every club he could get in, and had gone everywhere posible in order to meet people and get his mind off of me. He said this was how he came to get engaged—for he is now engaged, and maybe married by this time, for all I know.

He said the girl had done the proposing, after a fashion, and he had accepted. He also said he could get out of it, if I wanted him to, but that the other girl was very sincere and planning toward their marriage, and he thought if he broke with her it would be a perpetual reproach to us.

He said if he did marry her, however, he probably would regret it the rest of his life; and that he's never gone with any girl he liked as much as me. But because of my aloofness during the two years, he had finally decided I didn't want to be bothered.

Should I try to do anything about it? Three weeks ago he was driving through this city and he stopped to see me, but I wasn't home at the time. The other girl was with him in the car. I am afraid they were just getting back from their honeymoon, but I have no way of making sure. Your advice will be appreciated.

CLEMENTINE.

Accept the Denouement As Best for Both

DEAR CLEMENTINE: It seems to me that you have waited until half-past the zero hour to ask what might be—or could have been—done to retrieve your neglected opportunity. However, the desperate gesture you made on your own initiative some while back—in breaking down and telling the man you loved him and would marry him—brought such negative results as to indicate that the other girl had, even then, already securely lassoed your timorous suitor.

His "sentimental" streak, to which you refer, undoubtedly stood in the way of his embracing your last-minute "lead." In his soft-heartedness—and because he liken that girl's regard for him to his long-suffering devotion to you—he just hasn't the cruel courage to inflict upon her the beating that he feels he took from you, in the years preceding.

I think he tried to make clear to you, on that occasion, that so far as he was concerned, the Great Renunciation had already been made; that he felt himself to be permanently, morally committed to the other girl, and that he was prepared to keep his bargain at whatever sacrifice of feeling. In remarking that "he could get out of it, of you wanted him to," BUT that "if he broke with her it would be a perpetual reproach" to yourself and him—it seems to me he was trying to show you (a) that you were, indeed, his first preference, but that (b) he was now forever barred, by ethical considerations, from accepting your offer of yourself.

A man of stronger character might have stated his position more precisely and finally, but then, a man of stronger character would not have permitted you to hold him at arm's length, in ignorance of your feelings and intentions, for so long a time. And a man of really forceful personality would, by his general behavior, have rendered his physical stature a negligible item, in any accounting of his social presentability. So, in muddling through to an inconclusive and mutually unsatisfactory "write-off" of your romance with him, your beau ran true to his particular form—which is nebulous and deprecatory.

But I expect he is marrying the right girl for him; the girl who will do most for him—in marrying a girl who knows right off the bat what she wants and doesn't go through any false motions about getting it. Obviously his short stature is no handicap in her eyes; and she may prize him so highly as a husband that she will build his self-esteem to the point where he becomes a more positive, assertive person. And even if she doesn't work this change in his character, her own driving competence probably will take him places (as part of the twain) where your half-heartednes never could.

Since, in my belief, there is nothing you can do to change the trend of events already set in motion—the best advice I can give you is to accept the situation philosophically as having turned out best for all involved. For this, I believe, is the basic truth of the matter. Your constant fear that you always would have felt self-conscious, if required to present him as your husband, shows that you never were sincerely in love with him.

You were moved (1) by a lively appreciation of his many fine qualities, and (2) by the fact that he was your devoted admirer—but it was not until you realized he was on the verge of passing out of your life forever that you attached any serious importance to him. I think it was the man's devotion, rather than the man himself, that held significance for you. It was reassuring to know there was a man in the offing whom you could (so you thought) marry if and when you chose.

You find it desolating to face the prospect that the man is no longer there—yours for the taking. But if he had been "the right man for you," (as the saying goes) you would have married him before the other girl had a chance at him. All he amounted to, actually, was a prop to your ego. And the real remedy for your distress is to find another beau who will be equally devoted and, I hope, a better approximation of your heart's desire.

Resolutions for a Fall Shopper

I will not try on any dresses unless I am definitely interested in them, but I will not let the fact that I have tried them on stampede me into buying anything I don't want because I find it embarrassing to get away from a strong-minded clerk.

If I discover the hat I have waited for all my life, I will not let price deter me, but I will not pay more than I can afford for any headgear that does not give me a lift when I look in the mirror.

I will not undertake to do the family shopping or lay in a string of notions for myself on the day that I embark on the great adventure of buying a new hat, dress or coat.

When I get home, I will act with vigorous determination upon that resolution I made when I saw myself in the triple mirror in the fitting room.

I will not walk through the dress goods department of any store for fear I yield to the lure of the fascinating fabrics and the thought of getting somebody's "little dressmaker" to fix me up.

I will grit my teeth, count 10 and make no retort no matter how many saleswomen tell me a certain hat or dress I don't like is "smart looking."

I will not be beguiled into taking any "basic" dress that will "look a lot different" when I "dress it up" with some stunning beads, a clip or gadget or a good-looking belt or collar.

I will not, in a panic, buy anything I'm not sure of because I'm told it's the "last of its kind" or that there won't be any more coming in, or that it's just come in and somebody else is likely to grab it if I don't decide right away.

I will try to bear with equanimity the repeated injunction that I won't be able to do any better anywhere else.

I won't weaken and think, "well maybe I am a slow old prude" and take the dress that is a shade too short or too tight and that I am assured is the length or fit everyone else is wearing.

I will not fall for any of those seven veil outfits that I can make suitable for every occasion by adding to or removing a jacket, a collar, a scarf or a doodad, but will consider myself fortunate if I find something that functions with grace and distinction in a single role.

If I am caught by my dearest friend or worst enemy trying on hats at the $1.98 counter, I will not be either flustered or apologetic. But, if I spot a friend anywhere at any time trying on a hat, I will have the good sense not to make my presence known, realizing that is one occasion when no woman wants an audience.

If I don't find the right garment, I will not weaken and decide that after all I can't do any better than the one I'm not quite sure of, but I will summon all my will power and step into the nearest street car or taxicab and say, "Home, James!"

Ivy Poisoning Prevention Is Easier Than Treatment

By Ida Jean Kain

Poison ivy is a lot easier to find than a four-leaf clover! The unsuspecting city person stumbles on this innocent looking but noxious acting little plant with the three famous leaves and sometimes takes it home—in one fashion or another.

You may have been taught to be on guard against anything that is green and has three shiny leaves. The leaves are oval and variously notched and grow three on a stem. In May and June there are clusters of small, yellow-green flowers. When the plant is young it is a small upright shrub, but later is becomes a climbing vine. In the fall you might not recognize your poison ivy—it turns a brilliant crimson and the flowers are succeeded by grape-like clusters of waxy-white berries. It's just as "catching" one time as another.

The oil so permeates the plant that you can contract poisoning by touching any part of it, roots, stem, berries or leaves. You can be poisoned merely by walking through the shrub and later touching your shoes. Once your clothing has come into contact with ivy, you can get another dose of the poisoning every time you put them on. The antidote is to send them to the cleaners and have them put through a special process.

Among the home remedies, the best is strong, yellow soap. And, of course, the sooner you can wash after contact, the better. However, the use of a strong soap solution is helpful even after itching occurs. You may get a mild case which requires only strong soap and a little calamine to relieve the itching. But if you break out in large blisters, see your doctor!

Like the woman who planted poison ivy at her home, there are those who are immune to the shrub, but most people are not. If you are very susceptible, you might be glad to know about the new cream suggested by the United States Public Health Department. The formula consists of 10 per cent sodium perborate, or 2 per cent potassium periodate, mixed with vanishing cream. The sodium of periodate coms in crystal form and are ground into powder before being added to the cream. The cream fills the pores of the skin and the action of the perspiration produces a soap which counteracts the poison. To be effective, the mixture must not be more than two weeks old.

Beauty Secrets

For Schoolgirl Complexion

THE COLLEGE girl has the spotlight now, and all over the country students, mothers and friends are getting ready to give her a rousing send-off. Of course, there is much concern about having the latest in dress. That means pompadour berets, bare knee socks and all the campus casuals as well as the glamorous evening gowns, date dresses, and dream coats for football games.

It is just as necessary to have a schoolgirl complexion as it is campus clothes. There is a compact little beauty kit—Seventeen—that contains five essentials: corrective cleansing cream for removing soil; fragrant skin freshener lotion to tone and refresh the skin after cleansing; for smoothing and softening the skin, a creamy, smooth-spreading special formula cream. The cream lotion is an ideal foundation base to coax make-up on smoothly and evenly. Lastly, there is a face powder if the correct skin tone. These preparations in miniature are contained in a gay little dubonnet and white checked box and tied with dubonnet satin ribbon, and just the gift to inspire Miss Seventeen to give attention to her complexion.

Mice and Microscope Help Bacteriologist Identify Types of Pneumonia

MANY a Washington victim of pneumonia owes his life to Emily Godfrey. She is the Health Department bacteriologist who tells doctors which of the 33 known types of pneumonia affects their patients. With her microscope and a number of mice, she identifies the type, enabling the doctor to use the particular serum fatal to that particular pneumonia germ.

Emily Godfrey

Her first step after receiving a sample of the patient's sputum is to mount a drop on a glass slide. She then adds one type of serum after another until she gets a positive reaction; when that happens, the tiny capsule surrounding the pneumonia organism swells, sometimes to the size of a golf ball, and tells her she has found the one serum out of all 33 which the patient requires.

To make sure the pneumonia germ and not some other bacillus has made the patient ill, she always injects a mouse, which shares human susceptibility to pneumonia and dies of it within a few hours. The mice cost $2.50 a dozen, and during the winter she sometimes uses 75 a day. Keenly aware that she herself is in constant danger of sharing their fate, she washes her hands hundreds of times a day. But there's always a chance of a syringe backfiring or a slide breaking; such an accident might be fatal.

A year and a half ago Mrs. Ed Reed and her cartoonist husband (see "Off the Record" in today's Post) decided that after nearly three years of marriage it was time they had their first vacation together. So they left their Des Moines apartment for a two weeks' trip, which proved to be such fun that they disposed of the apartment and kept on going. Mrs. Reed admits that summer is a strange time of year to fall in love with Washington, but despite the recent heat they couldn't seem to leave. She's business manager of the combination, which is now located at the Wardman Park; she answers fan mail, keeps books and handles all the other details which artists traditionally loath.

Speculation is rife at the Bureau of Standards as to the fate of the international standards of weights and measures stored in an underground vault near Paris. During the last war and for a year or so afterward, no one could get into the vault because one of the three keys needed to open the lock was held by a German official. The committee which now holds custody of the keys is composed of an Italian and two Frenchmen, all of whom must be on hand to work the combination—which is thus a doubly complicated one.

Actually, the loss of the international standards would not upset the scales and yardsticks of the world. The United States standards—a cylindrical kilogram weight and a long bar divided into meters—are kept in a vault at the bureau here. Both the weight and the length measures have been taken to Paris to be checked with the international standards within recent years, and could pinch hit for the real thing until the world situation clears up.

Lemons in Diet Offer Many Benefits

LEMONS have particular health and protective value because they contribute (a) mineral (calcium, phosphorous, iron) together with alkaline salt, used for body building and regulating; (b) fruit acids, providing appetite stimulation and useful with the water and cellulose (or laxative bulk) of these fruits, as an aid to elimination; (c) fruit sugars furnishing quick energy; (d) vitamins A, B, C.

Because this citrus fruit is so beneficial we should strive to incorporate it into our diet. That is very easy, for the addition of lemon juice is excellent for appetite appeal. The use of lemon juice in salad dressings is one way of getting lemon into the diet.

The whole world is not dieting, although it seems so from the great number of calls received for Reducer's Salad Dressing recipes. For those who do want to make reducer's dressings, I am giving the following recipes.

Reducer's French Dressing

Let 1 slice of onion stand in ¼cup lemon juice for 10 mnutes, combine ½ teaspoon salt, a dash each of pepper and paprika, 1 teaspoon sugar. Add te vinegar and ¾ cup mineral oil to dry ingredients and sake well.

Reducer's Mayonnaise

Beat together - egg yolk, ½ teaspoon mustard, ½ teapoon salt and a dah of pepper, and 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Add 1 cup mineral oi very slowly, drop by drop, until mixture begins to thicken. Then add alternate mineral oil and 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Use purified, heavy mineral oil.

LUCERNE MILK
ONE QUART
GRADE A
PASTEURIZED MILK
A MILK ESPECIALLY FOR THE GROWING CHILD
A rigidly inspected milk of correct richness . . . . fresh from just the cleanest, most carefully selected kind of farms.

Milk from the finer kind of herds that's rich in cream and healthful milk solids

THE Lucerne Milk people, who pay for this advertisement, do not claim that Lucerne is the only clean, healthful milk in this city. All milk sold here is safe and good.

But Lucerne does want even more women to know this:

Lucerne Grade A is produced especially for the growing child. It is a milk that meets his needs Every Day because it is uniform in richness, healthful milk solids and flavor. It is an ideal milk for adults, too.

How can these things be promised? Quite simply.

Take the matter of richness. Milk is supplied to us by high grade dairy herds on nearby Maryland and Virginia farms that are approved by District of Columbia Health Authorities. Lucerne dairy experts picked these farms from among many. Then Lucerne built here a model new plant equipped with only the latest machinery for scientific control. "Guesswork" has been entirely eliminated. Lucerne is always richer in butterfat than the law requires for Grade A.

Freshness too is protected carefully. Country pick-up routes are short. Schedules of pasteurization and packaging are fast. Deliveries to stores are made in insulated and refrigerated trucks. Store conditions are ideal with modern refrigeration equipment assuring constant temperature control.

Cleanliness is guarded by the modern "one-trip" container. Packages are sterilized just before filling and the pouring lip is sealed inside where nothing can touch it before it is used. The package is used just once, then thrown away. There is no deposit and nothing to return.

Try Lucerne today. No Grade A milk sold here is finer. Yet, because there is no home-delivery charge in the price, you pay less.

Church Must Regain Spirit of Cross, Visiting Cleric Tells Youth Conclave

EXAMINING THE EXHIBITS—Ruth Overholt, 18 (left), and Eileen Tyree, 17, both from Akron, Ohio, were overlooking nothing when they were pictured looking over something at the convention exhibition

Several hundred delegates to the International Youth Convention of the Church of God yesterday heard the Rev. Lowry Quinn charge that the modern church, because it has lost the Cross' real meaning, is soft, easy-going and powerless.

The church must regain the spirit of the Cross—the way of sacrifice, suffering and humility, the Lima, Ohio, cleric said at an afternoon session at First Congregational Church, Tenth and G strets northwest, where the conclave opened on Saturday.

Christian unity can only come through surrender and sacrifice, he told the youths from many States. Young people, he said, are disgusted with the divisions of denominations and sects.

Adam W. Miller, president of the Youth Convention, presided over the meeting, after which the delegates rode out to Sixteenth and Taylor streets northwest, where ground was broken for a new $100,000 church and educational building for the local congregation of the denomination. Elver F. Adcock, missions official of the Church of God, was principal speaker. Mrs. Esther M. Boyer is pastor of the local church.

Dale Edwin, 4-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Speake, of Marbury, Md., was youngest to attend the sessions which began at 8:30 a. m. with worship and conferences.

The young people met in various parts of the First Church for discussions on "How Far Can the Christian Go With the Crowd?," the "Church at Work With Young Married People," "Adults in Partnership With Youth," "What the Services of the Church Can Mean to Me," and other subjects.

An address by Dr. Walter Judd, Congregational medical missionary to China, and champion of that country's cause in its present conflict, will highlight the fellowship dinner tonight at 6 o'clock. A college alumni luncheon is set for 12:15 p. m.

Discussions are scheduled for today for ministers, youth leaders, high school students and young people. At 9 a. m. Miss Nellie Fields will speak on "Winning Others for Christ" and A. Leland Forrest on "A Person-to-Person Ministry." A sightseeing trip will begin at 2:30 p. m.

Slated for tomorrow are a communion service and conferences in the morning; a married couple's luncheon and discussion on "Creating Happier Homes," in the afternoon, and a dinner meeting for pastors at 6 p. m. Speakers will be Leland Foster Wood and Ross H. Minkler.

1,000 Hear Minister's Farewell

Luther Place Congregation Hears Final Sermon By Dr. Rasmussen

One thousand members of Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, yesterday assembled in the gleam of a freshly painted auditorium to hear Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen conduct his farewell service as pastor.

Failure of the congregation's farewell gift to the pastoral family to arrive in time did not detract from the spirit of the occasion. But it did draw some facetious remarks from Dr. Rasmussen.

He also extended a blanket invitation to members to visit Gettysburg, Pa., where he is becoming professor of Systematic Theology at the Lutheran Theological Seminary.

Praises Congregation

In "Benediction," his farewell sermon to a congregation he has led for a decade, Dr. Rasmussen asked that his new step be regarded as "an adventure together;" as a phase of the whole Christian Church's program.

"The work at Gettysburg is Luther Place's work," he said.

Lauding the spiritual response and fidelity of his flock, he declared, "in no place have I found such responsiveness in the hearts of the people as in the Nation's Capital.

Dr. Rasmussen had emphatic praise for his successor at Luther Place, Dr. Charles B. Foelsch, pastor of Zion Lutheran Church, of Sunbury, Pa.

Early in the service, the cleric revealed receipt of a letter from Representative Robert F. Rich (Republican), of Pennsylvania, his friend, praising completion of the auditorium renovation project, and inclosing a substantial contribution toward it. The legislator was present.

Congratulatory Messages

During the testimonial part of the service, letters and telegrams were read congratulating Dr. Rasmussen on the new appointment and expressing regret at his leaving Washington. One came from the Rev. Edward Ziegler, formerly assistant pastor.

Welcoming a group of new members into the church, Dr. Rasmussen said that his greatest happiness during his pastorate was in opening the door of Christian fellowship to men and women.

At the close of the service, members filed to the front of the church to bid the clergyman good-by; Mrs. Rasmussen and their two children, Mary Elizabeth, Gettysburg College student, and Carl, jr.

Twenty-five years ago last May Dr. Rasmussen was graduated from the Gettysburg Seminary.

Try to Pass Truck

Murphy was killed when the car in which he was riding struck a telephone pole on Riggs road northeast, police said. The car turned over several times. Police said the car was driven by Earl C. Moore, 27, of 222 Concord avenue northwest. Charles Fawler, 26, of 310 Tulip avenue, Takoma, Md., was slightly hurt and was treated with Moore, also slightly injured, at Walter Reed Hospital. Moore was held by Twelfth Precinct police for the coroner's action.

Two men were injured, one seriously, when a car they were driving struck a culvert on Route 50, near Centerville, Va., late yesterday.

A possible fracture of the skull was suffered by Walter Sams, of Williamsville, Va., and multiple cuts by John Weakley, of 2101 North Kenmore street, Arlington, when they attempted to pass a truck on the highway and struck the culvert abutment.

The men were taken to Alexandria Hospital by the Fairfax County Ambulance Corps. Officer Carl McIntosh investigated. Sams' condition last night was described as "not critical."

Earl Hyde, of Hyattsville, Md., a pedestrian, was struck by a car while walking at the intersection of Spencer and Wine avenues and was taken to Casualty Hospital with a fractured arm and possible back injuries. Samuel A. Braunstein, of 3701 Fourteenth street northwest, was said by police to have been the driver.

Church Lacks Old Vitality, Pastor Says

Christianity Must Recapture Early Spirit, He Asserts

Christianity must recapture the valiant spirit of its early days if it is to be adequate for the moral leadership of our present and future civilization, the Rev. Nathaniel C. Acton said yesterday morning at St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square, of which he is curate.

"Our churches have numbers, wealth, position and efficiency, but anything resembling the spirit of the Apostolic Church is hard to find," he told the congregation.

"The church in those days never thought of itself in terms of a rest camp, but rather it was a group of valiant men who were willing to give all and not heed the cost," he asserted.

The rewards of victorious Christian living are in a happier, abundant, untroubled and complete life, T. B. Boone, teacher of the Men's Bible class at Dumbarton Avenue Methodist Church, Georgetown, said at yesterday morning's worship service, where he was guest speaker.

Another guest speaker, Dr. Joseph Dobes, formerly District superintendent of the Methodist Church in Prague, Czecho-Slovakia, described his experiences during the German invasion at last night's services at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church. He is a missionary supported by that congregation.

Funeral services for John Angevine, veteran Government printing pressman, will be held at 7:30 p. m. today at the Gasch Funeral Home, 48 Maryland avenue, Hyattsville, Md. Burial will be in Patterson, N. J.

In apparently good health despite his 80 years, Mr. Angevine was stricken Saturday as he was cutting the grass at his home, 505 Monroe street, Riverdale, Md., and died a few minutes later.

A charter member of New York Local 51, International Printing Pressmen and Assistants Union of North America (A. F. of L.), he came to Washington about 20 years ago and was employed at the Government Printing Office until his retirement about five years ago. He was a member of Washington Local No. 1 of the union. Survivors include his wife.

Mrs. Francis E. Smith yesterday was named general chairman of the annual communion breakfast of the Washington Retreat League, set for September 29 at the Mayflower Hotel.

Her selection was announced at a special meeting of the league at the home of the president, Mrs. Leo Kelly, 117 Monroe street, Riverdale, Md., attended by representatives from almost every Catholic parish in the Washington area.

Appointed to assist Mrs. Smith in the arrangements were Mrs. Joseph Egan, St. Gabriel's; Mrs. James Kelly, St. Joseph's; Miss Pauline Donnelly, Holy Comforter, and Mrs. Patrick F. Hannan, St. Matthew's Cathedral. The Rev. John S. Spence, the league's spiritual director, spoke briefly.

Police Investigate 2 Stabbings, Hold Wife of Victim

Armed Pair Accost Parkers; 'Snatcher' Takes $12.50 Tokens From Bus Driver

By Alfred E. Lewis
Post Staff Writer

Five youthful "alumni" of Jessup's Cut (Md.) Reformatory, who arranged to meet in Washington after their release, were under arrest here yesterday for a series of District robberies, The Post learned last night.

This disclosure came as two couples were robbed by bandits in parks, a bus driver was relieved of his pouch of tokens, and another man was "strong armed" and robbed of his watch.

The existence of the youthful gang was revealed to police last Monday when a police rookie, Pvt. J. G. Maichalick, of Sixth Precinct, nabbed a 22-year-old member in the alleged act of looting the Georgia and Kennedy Pharmacy, at 5433 Georgia avenue northwest, it was reported.

Notebook Gave Addresses

Two of the youth's companions escaped, but a notebook was found in his possession containing the names of six other Jessup's Cut "graduates" and their Washington addresses, police said. The six were arrested last week, but two were released for lack of evidence.

The other five will be charged this week for a number of pocketbook snatchings, holdups and housebreakings. More than a score of robbery victims will examine them at a special line-up tomorrow night at Police Headquarters, The Post's informant said.

One of the youths is reported to be an employe of a Washington iron firm. He is said to have obtained crowbars for housebreakings for the gang from his place of employment.

Robbery victims who have already identified the youths as their assailants include Rebecca R. Holbrook, whose adddress was not immeditely available; Herman Wesslink, of 722 North Carolina avenue southeast, and J. S. Gruver, of 5460 Thirty-ninth street northwest.

The youths were arrested by Det. Sergt. Eugene Lambert, of Eighth Precinct, and Det. Sergt. H. E. Moore, of Seventh Precinct.

Elsewhere on Washington's crime front yesterday, John Edelston, of 1536 Seventeenth street northwest, and Miss Helen Ulrey, of 1906 Florida avenue northwest, were held up by two colored men while they were parked on Riverside drive in the early morning near Highway Bridge.

Bandit Flourished Gun

One of the bandits, they told police, flourished a gun and ordered Edelston to turn over his wallet containing $6 and personal effects. Miss Ulrey gave up $1.50.

Also victims of a holdup pair were William O'Brien, 217 Second street southeast, and Anita Lang, 1702 Q street northwest. The couple told police the robbery took place near the Lincoln Memorial reflecting pool. O'Brien lost his watch and $20 in cash. The bandits, they said, were colored men.

Strong-armed as he walked through Lafayette Park, William H. Higginbottom, of 1730 H street northwest, told police he was robbed by a white man of his wrist watch, valued at $20.

While parked at Seventh and P streets northwest to take on passengers, Earl W. Woods, a bus driver for the Capital Transit Co., reported that a colored man snatched his black leather bag containing tokens valued at $12.50.

Women Draft Foes To Honor 'Next Unknown Soldier'

Women foes of conscription will deposit a wreath "To the Next Unknown Soldier" in Arlington Cemetery Wednesday, The Post learned yesterday.

Scores of black-veiled, middle-aged members of the Congress of American Mothers, who maintained a "death watch on the conscription bill" outside the Senate chamber last week, will interrupt their vigil to take part in the demonstration, leaders of the group said.

According to Mrs. Mary A. Dekker, of Detroit, president of the Mothers of the U. S. A., one of the sponsors of the congress, the "death watch" will be continued all this week and at least 100 more women will join the protest today.

The contractor is C. R. Karlstromer, of Arlington County. Plans for the brick and steel structure have been prepared by Louis R. Moss, architect.

New Orleans Man, 65, Would Swap Land For Job or a Home

Walter Ward, 65, is an impractical man. He's impractical to the extent of admitting it.

He came up from New Orleans last night, arriving in Washington after six days of thumbing his way. His card reads: "W. Ward. The Vagabond Poet. Philosopher-Psychologist-Now Broker."

"Down in New Orleans a lot of folks think I'm peculiar," he said. "That's because I keep to myself so I can write my poetry."

But a poet—and he's a pretty good rhymer from the verse he recited—must eat. That's why he came to Washington. Not for handouts, not begging. He came "for justice from the Government."

Once Well-to-Do

Once Walter Ward was well-to-do. He ran a boiler factory in New Orleans where his father and grandfather were prominent in civic life. He went to New York and traveled throughout this country and Europe for a construction firm. Then he returned to New Orleans to retire and write poetry.

In the depression he lost everything but a parcel of land on which he lived. An accident causing a fracture of his skull put him even worse on his uppers.

The ramifications of getting on relief rolls in Louisiana puzzled him, and in desperation he wrote the President that he would give his parcel of land "to help pay the national debt" if the Federal Government would give him a job "or even send me to a home anywhere."

Get Run-Around

The Federal Government referred him to the State; the State referred him to the city; the city shoved him off on the county; and the county sent him to the State. Two years of the vicious circle brought him to Washington on foot, with $2 in his pocket.

Today Walter Ward will wander into the labyrinth of Government relief agencies. He's skeptical that he'll get anywhere.

"I'm practical enough to doubt that," he said.

If the Government fails him he's going to push on afoot to New York where he'll try to get a job as watchman with the firm in which he was once an executive.

Capital News In Brief

An Old, Old Story; Fireman Saves Child

This is the old one about the handsome fireman and the pretty little blonde.

While playing hide-and-seek yesterday, Annette Yager, 3½, locked herself in the bathroom of her home at 5319 Nebraska avenue northwest and couldn't get out. Her mother, Mrs. David Yager, summoned No. 2 Rescue Squad.

To Fireman Melvin E. McBride, described by his colleagues as "dark and handsome," was delegated the task of rescue. He entered by a window to find Annette in nature's garments. Embarrassed, she started to cry. Fireman McBride gallantly wrapped a towel about her and unlocked the door.

Transit Co. Work Hours Shifted for Picnic

Shifts in schedule will make it possible for virtually all employees of the Capital Transit Co. to enjoy the annual outing of the company's employes' relief association at Glen Echo Park tomorrow, a member of the entertainment committee announced last night.

Nearly 10,000 are expected to attend the frolic, which begins at 1 p. m. at the amusement park. Besides dancing, athletics, and novelty contests, the program includes free passes to all concessions at the park for persons attending.

Alexandria Adds Two 'White-Wing' Carts

The Alexandria sanitation department has constructed two new "white winged" pushcarts, placed in service recently in an effort to augument the city's current clean-up campaign. There also will be a distribution of approximately 60 additional trash recepticles along the principle thoroughfares, City Manager Budwesky said yesterday.

Holy Rosary Church Opens Carnival Tonight

The annual carnival of Holy Rosary Italian Catholic Church will open tonight at 8 o'clock in the parish hall at Third and F streets northwest, continuing through September 1. Special entertainment has been arranged for each night.

The general chairman will be M. Del Grosso, assisted by Dr. Raphael Manganaro, Salvatore Aquino and Frank Storty. The entertainment committee includes A. Cotturo, P. Facchiano and Mrs. Catherine Passero.

Virginia Justice Cowed by 'Bossy' Radio Report

Winchester, Va., Aug. 25.—Miss Bertha Kline, secretary to Trial Justice Donald Weems, is away on vacation and her employer will be glad when she returns.

Friday, before leaving, Miss Kline received a long-distance telephone call from New York stating she had won a cow in a radio contest. How she won it is a mystery to Miss Kline, who knew, she said, nothing of the contest, save what a young lady in New York told her.

That was merely that she and two others represented Virginia and that she was the winner. The cow, the voice at the other end of the line said, was being shipped from the New York stockyards.

Meanwhile, Judge Weems' office has been swamped with telephone calls from persons who heard the broadcast announcement of Miss Kline's good fortune. They want to rent pasturage, sell feed and stable equipment.

The jurist ventured his clerk would know how to milk, if put to the test, but said he didn't know what would be done if the cow arrived before Miss Kline returns.

Red Cross Finishes Surgical Dressings

Berryville, Va., Aug. 25.—Clarke County Chapter of the National Red Cross, finished 10 days ahead of schedule, its quota of 17,000 surgical dressings, five women's and five children's dresses, two layettes and doubled their quota of sweaters, socks and scarfs. Mrs. Graham Dougherty, chairman of the Volunteer Service Corps, announced that a meeting will be held September 11 at her home, Woodley, for members of the Home Hygiene class who have 18 hours to their credit. They will be awarded Red Cross pins. Mary O'Fallon of Berryville, taught the class at the Winchester Hospital.

10 Fail Test For D. C. Air Squadron

Physical Exams 'Wash Out' Half Of Class; New Vacancies Created

Ten of 20 prospective flying officers were "washed out" of the District National Guard's newly organized 121st Observation Squadron when they failed in physical examinations last week, Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the Guard, disclosed yesterday.

The 50 per cent washout creates new vacancies for potential officers, who will be sent to Army Air Corps training schools for flight instruction in the next two or three weeks, said Gen. Cox.

Most of the examination failures were attributed to faulty eyesight and hearing and high blood pressure.

Seventeen more men have been selected to take the examinations, but a total of 29 will be accepted for flight training. This leaves some vacancies, the number depending on how many of the 17 pass the exams.

Candidates for pilot training are required to have at least two years of college credits. They must be between the ages of 20 and 26, inclusive, and pass the strenuous physical examinations.

Upon completion of the nine-month training course, during which they are paid $75 a month plus allowances, the successful applicants will be commissioned second lieutenants in the 121st Observation Squadron.

Mrs. Chambers, 89, Widow of U. S. Missionary, Dies

Mrs. Cornelia Pond Williams Chambers, whose husband and father were both American missionaries, died yesterday at a Washington nursing home. She was 89.

Born in Beirut, Syria, she spent practically all her life there and in Turkey. Her father was Frederick Williams, of New York, and her husband, William Nesbitt Chambers, of Canada.

Mrs. Chambers came to Washington four years ago, after her husband's death.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Donald C. Blaisdell, of Washington, and Mrs. Laurens H. Seelye, of New York City, and six grandchildren, among them Miss Dorothea Seelye, of Washington.

Wed in Winchester

Staunton, Va., Aug. 25.—James Edwin Runnels, jr., and Mrs. Margaret Dunlap Brooks were married yesterday in Winchester by the Rev. E. S. McGavock of the Presbyterian church. They will reside at The Farm, near Mint Spring. Mr. Runnels is a Staunton business man.

Mickey Rooney Booked For Personal Week Here

Ace Box-Office Star at Capitol, Sept. 19; Gayety to Open Burlesque Season Sunday; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THE IMPORTANT WEEK-END WORD to motion picture "fans" of the Capital seems to be that Mickey Rooney is definitely articled for a week of personal appearances at Loew's Capitol Theater, beginning September 19—although this would seem to anticipate by a day the usual opening date of new bills at the top Loew house, if you can do with what sounds like a bit of a paradox.

BELL

The Rooney being the Rooney, that appears to be about all that need be said. No need to remind the seasoned picture-goer that Master Rooney last year was voted the most popular box-office star in America; nor that he is far and away the most versatile juvenile player the theater has encountered, one is tempted to say, since the emergence of George M. Cohan 'way back when. While Mickey's abilities and accomplishments are thoroughly mature, being still well this side of his majority, he still must be set down as a "juvenile" player. Many a performer old enough to be his grandpappy, nevertheless, could take advantageous lessons from him.

When he and Judy Garland appeared on the Capitol stage for a single day, a good many months back, as the crow flies, I watched them work from a "wing-tip" backstage. Both of them, but Mickey preeminently, possesses the instinctive sense of "theater" of the born trouper. Unaffected and "regular" youngsters away from the footlights, once back of that glare and in those spotlights, they smash their stuff over by sheer dint of native talent, a complete command of the tricks of their trade and a boundless, youthful enthusiasm.

One, of course, could go back to the fact that Mickey made his stage debut at the age of 11 months, when his mother carried him on the stage, and that he danced and clowned his way through vaudeville with his professional parents, eventually getting around to the screen's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," the "Hardy" series, and so forth and so on. But what's the use?

Washington, incidentally, is particularly favored by the Rooney booking. His local week will be one of only four that he is filling "on the road" during a brief recess from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, where he and Judy Garland have just completed "Strike Up the Band," said to outpace "Babes in Arms" about the way an airplane does a scooter. If I have given the impression that Judy will be along on this junket, I am sorry. It is a Mickey Rooney solo flight.

The military already has dipped into the local theater. Patrons of the National will be interested to know that Lieut. John S. Kintz, Finance Reserve, for many years chief of personnel at the famous old E street playhouse, has been on duty with the Twenty-ninth Division during its three weeks of maneuvers. Lieut. Kintz has been instructing two non-commissioned officers and four privates, first class, in their duties as they relate to the finance section of the division—just in case they should be mobilized along with the rest of the National Guard.

All aquiver with excitement at the prospect, Manager Bernie Ferber, of the Gayety Theater, announces that the new season of burlesque on Ninth street will open with the Sunday matinee performance on September 1. The inaugural attraction will be "Funs-a-Poppin'", with Vicky Welles the "extra added attraction" and George Murray and Frank X. Silk, veteran comics, heading the dipsy-doodle department, with Chick Hunter in the role of straight man. The supporting ensemble is about the best the "wheel" is able to muster. So there it is.

Her many admirers will be distressed to learn that Eileen Ritter, the popular Roxyette, who personally conducts those "Sing-a-Song-with-Mike" adventures in solo vocal effort, at the Earle, following Friday's first performance of the current bill, was whipped into Sibley Memorial Hospital for a sudden week-end appendectomy. They will be equally pleased to know that at last report she was resting comfortably and already counting the days until she will be back on the job. During her absence, Joan Ritter, Eileen's cousin, is conducting the "Sing-a-Song-with-Mike" item with high success. It was Joan who presented the Earle's popular songfest feature at the Silver Theater, Silver Spring, Md., Saturday night at the benefit performance for the American Red Cross Fund. If the best wishes of her friends have anything to do with it, Eileen should be practically well by now.

The temper and viewpoint of the British people is eloquently reflected in this excerpt from a letter recently received by Manager Edmund Plohn, of the National, from Leonard Rooke, secretary of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Co., a functionary well known and graciously remembered in Washington: "We are all cheery over here and all goes well, to date. We are all determined to win through, however long—or short—the process may be. This Empire was never more determined and united than it is today. Future history will speak for us louder than words. 'Jitters' is a word never used here, for it does not exist. Food is good and plentiful; rationing insures fairness to all. When this letter reaches you, you will know for a fact that our ships still sail the high seas and that the Union Jack still flies as proudly as ever."

Bombs-Bursting-in-Air Note

War in Britain In First Place At Trans-Lux

Varied Bill Includes Domestic Events and Diversified 'Shorts'

The battle of Britain takes the high spot in the news section at the Trans-Lux Theater for the current week. The Channel war is revealed in all its horror, while the British home defense is in constant drill.

The Cunard liner is shown arriving in New York with the British refugee children, while the Duke and Duchess of Windsor play host to the press. One of the most colorful sections in the news are the picture of the East Indian troops as they are greeted on their arrival in England by the King and Queen. Other foreign subjects include the British surprise attack on Libya, first movies of Mrs. Winston Churchill; the salvaging of the German ships by the British at Scapa Flow.

The domestic news is headed by the first pictures of the United States Mosquito Fleet, while Secretary Ickes makes his reply to Willkie. Willkie is also shown down on the farm, and Dionne Quins receive a group of American editors. In the world of sports there is an Indian canoe race, trap shooting, the Sun Valley rodeo and desert aquaplaning.

The travelog for the week takes you to "Old New Orleans." Here is a splendid camera tour of this fascinating city with its famous landmarks and interesting architecture.

"Bubbling Troubles" is the title of the latest "Our Gang Comedy." Here we find experiments in the making of dynamite which is tried out on Alfalfa with most amusing results.

The latest "Screen Snapshots" gives intimate glimpses of the movie stars in their leisure moments. "Tom Turkey and his His Harmonica Humdingers" is the color cartoon for the week.

Pete Smith Foiled By 'Lounge Lizard'

As an actress, Mlle. Lacerta Virldis is just a lounge lizard. So Pete Smith says after trying in vain to make Mademoiselle "emote" for a scene in his latest specialty, Quicker'n a Wink."

Pete planned a scene of the lizard catching a fly as the stroboscope, newest invention in speed photography, stops the action. But "Mam'selle" just would not go for the fly, though Pete waited hours. But the star commentator says he'll keep on watching, "if it takes till doomsday."

Dr. Harold Edgerton, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is supervising the film. George Sidney directs.

The New Yorker

Cecile B. DeMille, movie director, pinchhits today for Leonard Lyons, who is vacationing.

SUMMER is the time of year when the country is bedeviled by heat, flies, picnic lunches, political conventions and—"guest columnists." It's the time when the regular columnists go on vacation, innocently leaving their weapons in the vengeful hands of people who've been written about all year. But perhaps there's method in their madness after all.

MR. DE MILLE

THE GUEST columnist takes up the pen with deadly impulse . . . hesitates a moment . . . and is lost. He has waited just long enough to remember that anything he writes may be used against him in two weeks.

So he ends by writing a very mild-mannered column.

THAT HAS BEEN my own annual experience for 27 years, and since I have apparently succeeded in keeping at least some of the regular columnists still trustful, I conclude that discretion is the better part of guest columning. He who writes the tactful way will be asked to write another day.

But this time I'm going to take a chance and be a little less tactful—not with my gracious host in this space, but with Hollywood itself.

THE NOBLE profession of acting seems to be passing through a lamentable phase. It seems to be losing face among the very men and women here in Hollywood who profess to be practicing it.

That sounds like a paradox, and it is—a startling paradox.

Characterization, they tell me, is "old fashioned."

THERE IS A GROWING idea among both stars and lesser lights to "play themselves" on the screen. They don't even attempt to grasp a character and then play it as they conceive it to be intended. And the result is not only a loss of reality in their performances, but a serious consequence to the industry as a whole bf playing "themselves" over and over again, they're turning Hollywood's vast mine of screen talent into a tight little stock company. They forget that the good character actors last longer than the stars who "play themselves."

AND AFTER a while, the public gets very tired of one stock company. It wants new faces, new personalities, demands that Hollywood develop them. But in most cases Hollywood develops only one-role players—the kind that "play themselves"—and the same demand goes up again.

It seems to be a vicious circle.

I DON'T KNOW where this actors' "sit down strike" has come from—but I suspect it evolved itself out of a very commonplace and dull-witted self-consciousness which shies from real acting just as the traditional Miss Prim shies from "making a scene." Perhaps it involves a "ham psychosis," a fear of being criticized for overacting.

Well, I heartily agree that to overact is worse than to under act. But what about a good job of just "acting?"

THE OTHER NIGHT I saw and heard Helen Hayes submerge herself in the character of a little housewife and make the characterization so real that the 15-year-old and very familiar play in which she was starring became revitalized into tense and human drama.

And there are others in Hollywood of the same caliber. I think particularly of Akim Tamiroff and Lynne Overman, who, in "North West Mounted Police," I have teamed for the second time.

I COULD TEAM those two 50 times more, and every characterization they gave me would be different.

In the same picture, Gary Cooper, Madeleine Carroll, Paulette Goddard, Preston Foster, Robert Preston, George Bancroft and Walter Hampden come to mind for their sincere characterizations.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Aug. 25 (INS).—Such an interesting letter from Lady Eleanor Smith, postmarked London. She says in part: "Gregory Ratoff describes my book, 'Ballerina' as the feminine 'Goodbye Mr. Chips.' He is, I understand, about to direct the picture. My book has nothing whatever to do with schools, and could scarcely resemble Mr. Chips, being a story of the ballet. Furthermore, as it was published not long after the death of Mme. Pavlowa, it appeared long before Mr. Hilton's work, which I admired immensely. Think it's a great mistake for picture people always to make comparisons.

PARSONS

"I feel sorry to write a cross letter," goes on Lady Smith, "So I will try to atone by telling you such picture news as there is in London. Everyone loved 'Gone With The Wind' except for the sequence of wounded men, which is too near home for us. We all enjoyed 'Rebecca,' but resented the husband having been turned to milk and water by your censor, and not allowed to kill his wife. I find everyone in London misses French pictures so much. As you know, there was always a big public for them here. Guitry's last picture, 'Les Neuf Celibataires,' has been running for months. Now no one knows where he is. Nor has anyone heard of Yvonne Printemps, Pierre Fresnay, Francoise Rosay or Louis Jouvet. English pictures are not doing much, as most of the actors are in the army."

George Brent, out on his boat at Catalina enjoying the sad sea waves, has been paged by his boss, Hal Wallis. The reason is George is wanted to play the lead in "South of Suez" for Bryan Foy. That's the movie for which George Raft has been suspended. The picture is only waiting for the star (George) to get going and he will have to start today in order to be finished in time to emote with Bette Davis in "January Heights." George's heartthrob, Ann Sheridan, is leaving immediately for Honolulu, so he probably won't mind this extra job.

Edgar Bergen, whose only proteges, up to now, have been Charlie McCarthy and Mortimer Snerd, has a new favorite. She is Thelma Jean Graham, 12-year-old child ventriloquist who lived in Nashville, Tenn. Edgar saw her when he went to Nashville to get his plane and arranged with Judge Sam Tatum to bring her and chaperone to Hollywood where she will be thoroughly instructed in the art of ventriloquism, of which Edgar is a past master. What a break for the little girl and what a nice thing for Edgar to do.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Dolly Thon is no longer Mickey Rooney's heartbeat; don't be mislead, because Wendy Barrie went with Greg Bautzer to "Tonight At 8:30." He and Dotty Lamour are still aflame. Dorothy had to go to San Francisco and it was at her suggestion that Greg took Wendie. They all dined first with Greg; George Jessel at Victor Hugo with his mother-in-law, looked as if he might be stepping out with his younger sister; June Preisser planed to New York to be with her sister, Cherry, who is momentarily expecting the stork; Mack Grey wants all his girl friends to know the cutie he was escorting is his sister Mildred.

One of the gayest parties of the week was given by Bill Haines. Many of the guests came on from "Tonight At 8:30;" Lili Damita and Errol Flynn, the Lewis Milestones, the Jules Steins and some 20 others made merry. The Jules Steins, by the way, have purchased the old Fred Niblo house, which has such a gorgeous site atop a hill; Robin Thomas gave a farewell party at the house of Murphy Friday; the Darryl Zanucks entertained with a small dinner in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Miller last night.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

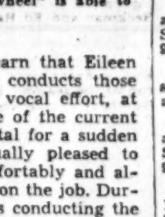
Hollywood, Aug. 25.

Laraine Day, Walter Wanger, and Joan Bennett are having a high old time. They flew East for preview showing of "Foreign Correspondent," which is one of the smartest things a producer's done in a long time. And are they scattering goodwill! Laraine had never been east of the Rockies before, and the second day in New York she milked a cow on Broadway and Forty-sixth street at high noon for a milk fund show for babies. When she refused a cocktail at a party given for her, it came as a big shock to the boys back there. She's never tasted liquor, tea, nor coffee—is purely a milk-fed baby, and a Mormon to boot.



HOPPER

Walter did all right on "Information, Please," too. If he keeps on he'll end up an announcer.

Paulette Goddard and Fred Astaire are so good together that they're going to be teamed in another picture—she'll do three dances. You've got to hand it to that little monkey. She said she was going places. Well, she's just going one place—and that's the top.

Since the Jack Bennys announced their coming blessed event, the Honolulu Chamber of Commerce has offered them half the island if they'll make a yearly pilgrimage. After 13 years' wedded bliss, to have this happen on the Paradise of the Pacific has given that place the greatest shot in the arm it's ever had. Fred Allen says as soon as he can arrange a vacation, he's going to take Portie over there and see if lightning won't strike twice in the same place.

At a recent plushbottom party, Marlene Dietrich passed out photographs of herself done up as a sailor boy.

Tom Pettey, who left the Hays office to do a chore for the new PM, commenting on the excellence of Willkie's speech, said, "I was 21 before I ever met a Republican, and it took me five years to discover they were people, too." Yes, he comes from Georgia.

Now that election time is just around the corner, I wish RKO would re-issue "The Great Man Votes." I remember one of Jack Barrymore's speeches from that picture. It ran something like this: "America is the country where greatness is within a people—not within one man. And where any man who sells himself 'great' is only looking at his shadow on the shoulders of those who have lifted him up. Today his own feet must carry him."

Jesse Lasky flew all the way to Albuquerque to escort Sergt. York to Los Angeles, where the at the Veterans of Foreign Wars sergeant will be a guest of honor Encampment here. York stays on to help with his life story.

I don't know when anything has pleased me so much as the marriage of Alec Templeton to Juliet Vaiani. He's been an inspiration to everybody who can't see, and those who can, and has earned happiness.

Nothing could be funnier than Hedy Lamar stepping out with Wooly Donahue and then not letting the candid boys snap them. He used to be devoted to Joan Bennett before she decided to become Mrs. Walter Wanger. Those two girls are so mixed up, higgle-de-piggledy—must take time out to look up their birth dates.

If you didn't know Bette Davis is Warners' top star, you do now. Bob Taplinger took a print of her latest picture, "The Letter," back East over the week-end so Bette could have a squint at it.

Hudson, Myer Heroes as Nats Top Indians 5-4

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

If there are any bleeding hearts in the house who have nothing handy to deplore, they might consider the case of Oscar Vitt, the bandy-legged little fellow who manages the Cleveland Indians (and not a bad sort; Vitt, we mean—not the Indians).

POVICH

This is the season in the American League when the Indians can win, but Vitt can't. If they lose, he loses. If they win, he loses. At least the evidence is that the stretch of the pennant race is the last mile for Manager Vitt, pennant or no pennant.

If Vitt doesn't know where he stands with respect to his job for 1941, he hasn't been reading the newspapers. Particularly did he miss the Associated Press' interview with Owner Alva Bradley in New York the other day when the president of the Indians hinted with all the subtlety of a black-jacking that Vitt wouldn't be rehired.

"Even the winning of the pennant and the world series won't smooth over the present difficulties of Vitt and the Cleveland players," said Mr. Bradley.

That ought to make matters plain enough. Vitt could lead a Cleveland team to the town's first pennant in 20 years and top that off with a world's series triumph, but he wouldn't necessarily be saving his job. As between Vitt and his darlings, the Cleveland players, Bradley seems to have had a definite choice else he wouldn't foster doubts of the retention of Vitt.

Mr. Bradley's latest statement apparently confirms the persistent reports that a promise to fire Vitt at the end of the season was a consideration when the Indians agreed to end their revolt against the manager two months ago. They were appeased by Bradley in a secret conference after their "Fire Vitt!" demands were made, but the secret of the secret conference is now pretty well apparent.

We don't know any other club owner who would have been so polite to a bunch of ball players who trooped into the front office demanding the manager's scalp, no matter what the charges. A composite answer to 'em by the composite big league club owner, Mr. Bradley excepted, would doubtless have been: Git out of here, you (one hyphenated word censored here) and get back on that ball field. I've got a manager who's running this club."

Bradley, however, didn't choose to back up his manager and now he has a fine mess on his hands. Whatever pleasantries there are between manager and players reek with hypocrisy. His players still don't like Vitt, and although he is a forgiving sort of guy, it is virtually vice versa. The Indians are threatening to blow their league lead and if they do, it will, of course be blamed on the awful situation on the club.

Because within the past few weeks there had been no new violent outbursts toward Vitt, and because the Indians are still leading the league, we asked a correspondent with the club if the players' resentment toward Vitt was still smouldering.

"Smouldering?" he repeated. "My dear fellow, you have just uttered a masterpiece of understatement. It is blazing. The 12 players who tried to get Vitt fired, now hate him worse than ever."

The complaints against Vitt at the time of the open revolt included, among others, that he was too sharp-tongued and ready to criticize. One player told Bradley frankly that they could not play their best for him because "he is driving us nuts."

On that basis, the Indians have a complaint also against the nasty old New York Yankees who certainly didn't contribute anything to their peace of mind when they slapped down the Indians in three straight games last week. Mr. Bradley's itty-bitty darlings are so easily upset.

That seems to be the kind of a club Manager Vitt has on his hands and if he wins a pennant with it, he should qualify as some kind of a miracle man. What else does Bradley expect him to win, bank night?

Veteran Ted Blanks Foe In First, 1-0

Champs Bounce Back To Win Second, 3-1, As Rookie Bonham Outpitches Lee

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 25.—Two pitchers—one a veteran who has been fooling American League batters for years—the other a rookie appearing in his fifth major league game commanded top billing as the Yankees and the Chicago White Sox halved a double-header before a topcoated audience of 70,740 spectators today.

Cagey Ted Lyons, 39-year-old wonder, outpitched Red Ruffing to stop the Yank string of victories at six when he tossed a magnificent three-hitter to win, 1 to 0, in the opening game, while Elg Ernie Bonham, 220 pound recruit from Kansas City, gained the Yankees an even split for the day, besting tall Thornton Lee, 3 to 1, in the nightcap.

The opener, a scoreless contest for eight innings, was won in the ninth when Taft Wright doubled home Luke Appling, who han singled Lyons, in getting his tenth win, allowed but one Yankee to reach third.

Bonham, who permitted five hits and did not issue a pass in the afterpiece, kept the White Sox away from the plate in all innings but the fifth—when Appling doubled and Wright singled him home.

The Yanks, held runless for 12 innings, pushed over two runs in the fourth on four singles and added their final score in the fifth when Frank Crosetti, who doubled, scored on Joe Gordon's single to leftfield.

The Yanks, in breaking even, picked up a half-game on the league-leading Cleveland Indians, staying in third place, 5½ games behind the Tribe, who lost their fourth straight game to Washington.

Joe DiMaggio, who developed a charleyhorse in Saturday's victory over Bobby Feller, started the first game today, but had to give way to Charley Keller after three innings. He got one of the Yankees three hits.

"Doc" Painter, Yankee trainer, said he did not think the injury particularly serious and expects the jolter to respond to treatment quickly.

Providence Man Sets Cycle Record

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 25 (AP).—Ben Campanale, of Providence, R. I., set a new motorcycle record on the State fair grounds track today, circling the mile dirt oval in 43.27 seconds.

His feat won pole position for him in the American Motorcycle Association National Championship 25-mile race.

The former track record of 44.43, set in 1937 by Stanley Witinsky, of Reading, Pa., was broken several times in today's trials. Witinski himself made the circuit in 43.53. Others bettering the former mark were Mel Rhodes, of Harrisburg, Pa., with 43.85, and K. J. Ingel, of Hammond, Ind., with 43.86.

Fritzie Baer, of Springfield, Mass., official A. M. A. announcer, said Campanale's time was the best ever recorded on a flat dirt track.

Lanahan Hurls Bucs To Win in Opener; Fitz Scores 13th

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Aug. 25.—Brooklyn routed the Pirates, 8 to 1, in the second game of a double-header today after Pittsburgh eked out a 4 to 3 triumph in the opener.

Homers by Arkie Vaughan and Vince DiMaggio provided the Buccaneers with a margin of victory in the first contest. Vaughan hit his circuit clout in the first with a man on base and DiMaggio batted a four-bagger in the fifth.

Young Dick Lanahan, who was nicked for eight hits, including Dolf Camilli's seventeenth homer of the season, was the winner and Whitlow Wyatt, the first of three pitchers, the loser.

Fat Freddie Fitzsimmons won his thirteenth triumph against two losses this year in the nightcap when he held the Buccaneer batsmen to five hits. Meanwhile, his mates pummeled four pitchers for 12 hits, including a homer by Babe Phelps in the ninth with one man on base. Pittsburgh's run was scored in the fifth.

Local Youth Wins Regatta Comet Honors

Clark Daniel Paces Class in Events at Millersville, Md.

By the Associated Press

Millersville, Md., Aug. 25.—Outsailing a fleet of 11, Clark Daniel, in his Robert E. Lee, from Washington, D. C., swept the comet division today to take two firsts in the closing stanza of Indian Landing Boat Club's third annual regatta on the Severn River near here.

Today's performance gave the young Capitol Yacht Club skipper three firsts in a row—a feat only duplicated by Richard Bartlett, of Severna Park, Md., in the national one-design, and Jack Reckord, of Towson, Md., in the snipe division.

79 Boats Compete

A fleet of 79 boats—two less than yesterday's recordbreaking group—sailed in a light to moderate northerly wind under overcast skies. As the last of the boats sailed across the finish line, a heavy downpour drenched the sailors.

While Daniel won by wide margins, in both races today, a close battle for second place honors was waged by Robert Welch, of Indian Landing, and Malcolm Lamborne, of Washington.

Welch, with a second and a third place today, won a final second position by one point.

Bud Harige Wins

The fast-moving round-bottom 20-footers saw young Buddy Hartge of Galesville, Md., take first prize after copping the day's opening race and a fourth in the finals. W. Phillips of Annapolis was second in his Rainbow.

A close fight in the Chine division of 20-footers found Vincent Kramer of Annapolis in his Sea Witch II nosing out Prentice Edrington's Lady Avon, from Washington. The Annapolis youth took two firsts in today's races.

Imagine Buddy Myer's Embarrassment on This Play

What should be waiting for Buddy Myer as he tried to steal third base in the second inning yesterday, but Third Baseman Ken Keltner with the ball in his glove. Myer was out, although he claimed that Keltner dropped the ball. Umpire George Pipgras seems to be very much on the job

Youngster Wins 13th; Myer's Base-Clearing Triple Features 1st-Inning Outburst

Sidney Hudson and Buddy Myer ganged up on the league-leading Cleveland Indians yesterday, relieved them of a 5-4 ball game and tightened the American League pennant race.

The combined efforts of the Nats' big pitcher and their little second baseman inflicted a fourth successive defeat on the Indians, whose league lead thus shrank to 2½ games coincident with the Detroit Tigers' victory over the Athletics.

Hudson, Myer and a game-long drizzle fell into the lives of the receding Indians. Ten thousand hardy fans braved the rain and saw Myer hit a line-drive first-inning triple with the bases full that was the important blow of the ball game.

His thirteenth victory was no breeze for young Hudson, however. In fact, the Indians mauled him vigorously, outhitting the Nats, 11 to 10, but he was competent enough to hang onto a one-run lead in the last two innings, after putting down a threatening revolt in the seventh.

Hudson's fast ball did not exactly baffle the Indians, but he was breaking off a clever slow curve and one of the two walks he issued was intentional.

Case Doubles

The Nats belted Johnny Allen out of the box in two-thirds of an inning, to the delight of the customers who unloosed their boos at the Cleveland right-hander when he squawked loudly at umpires' decisions on hits down the baselines. Their first-inning uprising netted the Nats a 4-0 lead.

George Case, fresh out of a long batting slump, launched the inning with a two-bagger against the left-field wall and Allen was in trouble when he hit Buddy Lewis after getting two strikes on him. The tension was eased a bit when Allen grabbed Johnny Welaj's attempted sacrifice and flung it to third base for a force play, but his next act was to fill the bases by walking Travis.

Then, along came Myer. His contribution was a screaming liner that skipped against the bleacher wall in left center and thre large Washington runs crossed the plate.

But the Nats weren't through. Jack Sanford reached base for the first time in the big leagues, drawing a walk from Allen. Pofahl struck out, but Rick Ferrell didn't. He singled over third base—Allen claimed a foul—to no avail, and Myer galloped hime from third.

Hudson in Trouble

Hudson was in trouble in the second inning, when Trosky led off with a double against the rightfield fence and Heath beat out a hit to Myer, but Cecil Travis delivered him from damage. Travis grabbed Keltner's low liner and doubled Heath off first base, and Mack grounded out to Pofahl.

Hudson didn't escape damage in the third. The Indians took a two-run chunk out of his lead after Pyt-

Jack Kramer, Schroeder Capture Title

Californians Beat Mulloy, Prusoff in National Doubles

By the United Press

Chestnut Hill, Mass., Aug. 25.—Jack Kramer and Ted Schroeder, 19-year-old Californians, who became partners in January, climaxed a brilliant season today when they won the National Doubles championship by defeating the fourth-seeded tandem of Gardnar Mulloy, of Coral Gables, Fla., and Henry Prusoff, of Seattle, Wash., 6—4, 8—6, 9—7.

The decisive triumph, gained in the final round of the fifty-ninth national championships, stamped the Kramer-Schroeder duo as the Nation's top doubles combination. It was their thirteenth title in 16 tournaments and their 76 win in 79 starts.

Kramer and Schroeder probably are the youngest doubles team ever to win the national crown, which was annexed last year by Adrian Quist and Jack Bromwich, of Australia. War prevented the Anzacs from defending their honors.

Marble-Palfrey Duo Wins

Alice Marble, of Beverly Hills, Calif., and Sarah Palfrey, of Brookline, Mass., won their fourth straight National Women's Doubles title by defeating the unseeded team of Dorothy Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif., nd Mrs. John Van Ryn, of Austin, Tex., 6—4, 6—3.

About 3,300 spectators watched the matches played under sunny skies on the famed grandstand court of Longwood Cricket Club.

Davis Cupper Kramer and Schroeder, the Nation's No. 1 junior, won the decisive games in all three sets by breaking through the powerful service of their opponents. The bespectacled Prusoff, unbroken in four semifinal sets yesterday, was the victim in the first set, while Mulloy, University of Miami tennis coach, yielded in the second and third sets.

Kramer Is Outstanding

Kramer, fourth-ranking junior and seventeenth in the men's list, was the outstanding player. He scored 22 placements, three more than Mulloy, and committed only 35 errors, 7 less than his Teammate Schroeder. Prusoff, who came back after being crippled by an elevator accident five years ago, was erratic, making 48 errors and scoring only 11 placements.

Undefeated since merging four years ago, Miss Marble and Miss Palfrey carried too much power for their opponents, who reached the final by upset wins over top foreign seeds, Valerie Scott and Mary Hardwick, of England, and the second-seeded domestic pair of Pauline Betz and Margaret Osborne.

The Bundy-Van Ryn combine gained a 3-to-3 tie in the first set by breaking the strong service of Miss Marble, queen of the world's tennis courts, and then led, 4 to 3, when Mrs. Van Ryn held service after three deuces. The titlists rallied to run off three games and win the set.

Siegel Suspended After Refusing To Meet Comiskey

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 25.—Heavyweight Don Siegel, former University of Michigan football tackle, was indefinitely suspended today by State Boxing Commissioner John J. Hettche for refusing to meet Pat Comiskey, of Paterson, N. J., here tomorrow night.

Siegel had signed for the bout last week while his manager, Vernon Larson, was out of the city. Larson had sought unsuccessfully to obtain a court injunction halting the fight.

Hettche said he would take action against Larson, whom he charged with failing to have a manager's license, and against Scotty Monteith, who yesterday took over Siegel's contract.

Bees Smash Cardinal Streak; Lose Nightcap

Posedel Yields Five Hits in Opener to End St. Louis Victories at Nine in Row; Cards Take Second Game, 8-5, on Late Rallies

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 25.—Boston's seventh-place Bees broke the Cardinals blazing winning streak at nine straight games by taking the first half of today's double-header, 4 to 1, but the Cards rebounded with an 8-to-5 victory in the nightcap to remain firmly in third place.

Only after a bitter struggle were the Redbirds able to win the second encounter. They were leading, 4 to 1, after five innings but Boston rushed ahead, 5-4, in the sixth.

Then Enos Slaughter, whose home run accounted for the Cards' lone tally in the first game, tied up the count with a timely single in the seventh. Johnny Mize promptly inserted his 37th homer of the season with a mate on base to decide the battle.

The Bees outhit the Cards, 13 to 10, in the second tilt but the latter profited through a pair of Boston errors.

Max Lanier, who relieved Carl Doyle when the bases were loaded in the sixth, was credited with the victory.

Dean Reappears With Athletics, Having No Alibi

"CHUBBY" DEAN

Philadelphia, Aug. 25 (AP).—Lovill (Chubby) Dean, Athletic pitcher, returned to the team today without any explanation as to his "disappearance."

Manager Connie Mack said yesterday he "had no idea" where Dean was, adding that "I think his failure to pitch as well as he expected to has upset him."

Dean was closeted for a few minutes with Mack after his return and the manager said later everything was all right. The lefthander was the first player on the field for the pregame practice before today's meetings with the Detroit Tigers.

Takoma Victor, 2-1, After 12 Innings

Takoma Tigers, Montgomery County League contenders, took a 2-1 decision over Friendship yesterday after 12 innings of exciting action. Wilson Heuer doubled, to start the winning rally, and was singled home by Adamson. Winning pitcher was Hank Gardner.

Kensington nine regained the league lead when it beat Four Corners, 8-6, while Silver Spring was edging out Colesville, 12-10. The only other game in the circuit saw Rockville trip Bethesda, 4-2.

Buck Scatters Nine Hits as Detroit Pounds Lee Ross

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 25.—Buck Newsom kept nine hits well scattered today and won his sixteenth victory of the season for Detroit when the Tigers rode roughshod over the Athletics, 7 to 3, before 19,794 at Shibe Park.

Detroit kept up a driving attack on Lee Ross, the A's starting pitcher, and he finally was removed for a pinch hitter in the seventh after giving up five runs and eight hits. Bill Beckman and Ed Heusser, who succeeded Ross on the mound, each were reached for a run.

Pete Fox greeted Beckman in the eighth inning with his fourth home run of the season. In the sixth, Joe Gantenbein smacked a homer for Philadelphia.

Errors by Gantenbein and Brancato contributed to the Tigers' scoring in the fourth and fifth innings. The last three innings were played in a drizzle of rain.

Reds Beat Phillies Twice, Boost League Lead Full Game

Turner Wins Opener, 3-2; Allows 5 Hits

Cincinnati Takes Nightcap, 6 to 5 Although Outhit; Rizzo Homers Twice

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Aug. 25.—The pace-setting Cincinnati Reds gained a full game in their National League pennant race today, putting them seven and one-half games in front, as they swept a double-header from Philadelphia 3-2 and 6-5 while the second-place Brooklyn Dodgers divided a twin bill.

Milkman Jim Turner, who had allowed only five hits, paced a ninth-inning attack which scored the winning run for the Reds in the first game. In the afterpiece Cincinnati got the best of a battle of bats, despite two home runs by Johnny Rizzo for the Phillies.

In the opener the Reds scored a run in the third inning on a pass to Billy Myers and Merrill May's high throw on Frank McCormick's grounder. The Phils took the lead in the fifth. Singles by Rizzo and Chuck Klein and a wild throw by Ernie Lombardi allowed Johnny to cross the plate. Bennie Warren singled to score Klein, who had advanced to second on Lombardi's error.

Cincinnati tied the score at 2-all in the eighth when Ival Goodman walked, stole second and came home on Frank McCormick's single. In the ninth Turner doubled, Bill Werber was hit by a pitched ball, Frey sacrificed, sending Turner to third and Frank McCormick was passed. Lombardi hit a grounder through Robert Braggan's legs, scoring Turner.

In the second game, the Reds counted three runs in the first inning as Frank McCormick hit his twelfth homer of the year, scoring two runs ahead of him. Rizzo got his first round-tripper in the second round with none aboard and put Philadelphia ahead in the third with a two-run homer. The Reds combined a triple, a double, a walk, a single and a wild throw to score three runs in the fourth.

lak and Eisenstat opened the inning with singles. Ben Chapman doubled into rightfield for the third straight hit, scoring Pytlak and moving Allen to third. Weatherly grounded out harmlessly to Sanford, but Boudreau walked and Allen dashed home on Trosky's grounder to Sanford.

In the third, Buddy Myer reached second with none out when he walked and advanced on a wild pitch, but he was overambitious and was out stealing third, just before Pofahl singled to center. Left Hander Harry Eisenstat was in the box for the Indians, having relieved Allen after Ferrell's hit in the first.

Score Decisive Run

The Nats scored their game-winning run in the fourth when George Case singled to center for the second of his three hits of the day. Buddy Lewis moved him to third with a single to right and Johnny Welaj moved him home with a fly to Chapman.

Hudson was in trouble again in the sixth when Trosky and Heath singled with one out, but he fanned Keltner on a wide curve and then disposed of Mack. But the Indians all but knocked him out of the box with a four-hit seventh.

Trouble started for the skinny rookie when Pinchhitters Rollie Hemsley and Campbell opened the seventh with singles. Hemsley's hit was a ground ball that handcuffed Travis, and Campbell singled cleanly to left. Ben Chapman flied out, and Rookie Sanford came up with a clever stop of Weatherly's drive behind the bag for the second out, but Lou Boudreau produced a single into leftfield that fetched two runs.

Welaj held Boudreau's hit to one base after failing to make a shoestring catch and Trosky followed with a two-bagger over Sanford's head to put both the tying and potential winning runs in scoring position. In this crisis, Heath was purposely passed to fill the bases. Jimmy Pofahl then helped Hudson out of the inning with a brilliant stop of Keltner's grounder behind second and a toss to Myer for a force play on Heath. The play was close and Umpire Geisel's decision favoring the Nats was helpful, to say the least.

Hudson did all right after that. In fact, the Indians didn't get to first base in the eighth and ninth.

'Skins A-Jitter As Pruning Date Nears

Three Veterans Likely To Get Knife as Six Rookies Impress

By Al Hailey.

A Staff Correspondent

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 25.—A broadside of jitters hit the Redskin camp today as the date neared for the first step in shaving down the squad of 45 men now in camp to the 33 permitted under National Pro Football League rules.

At least three veterans will be released to make room for six men from the group of 15 rookies battling for jobs.

The thought of that contract clause which permits the Redskin management to release a player on 48 hours notice is showing through the usual calmness and composure of the old hands, while several of the rookies are beginning to realize the hopelessness of their particular situation.

The rookies can be divided into three classes with the "sure bets" including Bob Seymour, halfback from Oklahoma University; Bob Hoffman, halfback from Southern California; Bob Titchenal, center from San Jose State; Ray Hare, halfback from Gonzaga, and Roy Zimmerman, halfback from San Jose State.

On the "doubtfuls" list are Bob Fisher, tackle from Southern California and the Los Angeles Bulldogs; "Bolo" Perdue, end from Duke; Steve Andrako, center from Ohio State; Sandy Sandford and Gene Blackwell, ends from Alabama, and Ernie Lain, fullback from Rice.

The "out-of-the-money gang" includes Vince Farrar, halfback purchased from the Pittsburgh club; Frank Kiss, center protege of Andy Farkas; Chuck Slagle, guard from North Carolina, and John Thomassin, tackle from Southern California.

Among the veterans, those who appear most uncertain are Maxie Krause, who may be placed on the inactive list; Jimmy German, Jim Meade, Don Irwin, Red Morgan and Jay Turner.

The entire picture is confused just now and will not clear up until after the second East-West intrasquad exhibition here Wednesday night. Flaherty will compare notes on that game with those on the East's 17-14 victory in Seattle last week as a basis for the slashing.

President's Cup Race To Draw 9 Starters

Original Field Expected for Event Sept. 27, 28, 29 Despite Mishaps to Favorites in Gold Cup Race; Hal Wilson May Be on Hand

Despite the fact that a real "dark horse" won the Gold Cup race last week, and the victory did not go to the swiftest, there will be no alteration in the expected line-up for the President's Cup race of the President's Cup Regatta next month over the Potomac, it was stated yesterday by the Race Committee headed by R. Aubrey Bogley. As announced before the Gold Cup races, either nine or ten starters will toe the mark for the big races September 27, 28 and 29.

Chairman Bogley and John A. Remon, president of the President's Cup Regatta Association, were at Northport, Long Island, for the Gold Cup races in the capacities of honorary officials, and at the same time got first-hand information on what took place there and what is in store for Washington Regatta followers.

All of the Gold Cup participants promised Bogley and Remon they would be on hand. These include Sydney Allen, the Gold Cup champion, otsy Totsy; Zamie Simmons, dethroned Gold Cup king, and My Sin; Herb Mendelson and Notre Dame, George Cannon and Gray Goose III, Horace Dodge and his Miss Syndicate, Lou Fageol and So Long and Gar Wood, jr., and Tinker Toy.

Cantrell to be Here

W. E. (Wild Bill) Cantrell and Marion Cooper, neither of whom competed at Northport, will come here with their Why Worry and Mercury, respectively, and Dr. A. L. Harbarger, of Akron, who pilots Art-Eff, is another expected to start.

Although Harold Wilson, of Ingersoll, Ontario, did not participate in the Gold Cup race, Bogley said there is still a fair chance that the defending President's Cup champion and his Miss Canada III will be on hand. Some definite word is expected from him in the next ten days.

Bogley said that none of the six Gold Cup drivers was downcast by the bad breaks and remain undaunted as they point for the President's Cup races.

Should Have Won

Mendelsons Notre Dame should have won the Gold Cup, Bogley said, had he been to the pits earlier and returned in time for the second heat after his boat broke a steering connection. With half of the last lap of the first heat to go, Zamie Simmons' My Sin and Notre Dame "conked out" within 50 feet of each other. Both were leading by several laps. My Sin threw a propeller blade, put on a new one, and competed in both the second and third heats. However, her struts were knocked out of line and she was able to run only 3 or 4 laps of the last 2 heats.

But Notre Dame blew its chances by getting back late to the pits for repairs; didn't have time to get out for the second heat, but won the third heat handily—so easily, in fact, that all the other boats were waived off the course, including Sidney Allen's new champion, Hoty Toty, which failed to finish within 9 minutes of Notre Dame's finish. Under the Gold Cup rules a boat must finish within 9 minutes of the first boat. Had Mendelson entered the second heat in time he would have won the Gold Cup with a total of 800 points.

Allen lost 400 points for not being familiar with the rules, Bogley said, for he slowed down in the third heat, as Notre Dame was zooming away at breakneck speed.

Dick McKee Wins Parks Singles Title

Diminutive Star Defeats Shostrom; Miss Germaine Victor

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Aug. 25.—Nineteen-year-old Dick McKee, the little Florida flash who was third seeded, won the National public parks men's singles tennis championship today by downing Charles Shostrom, of Chicago in straight sets, 6—3, 6—1, 6—1.

The diminitive Southerner, who swept his way into the finals by upsetting Bill Maul, of Detroit, shared tournament honors with Miss Helen Germaine, of New York, who won the women's crown by downing Mrs. Marceina Wiess Parker, of St. Louis, 6—4, 6—3.

McKee turned on the heat in the first round with his accurate drives and stayed in front. He mixed his serves and kept the ball to Shostrom's weak backhand much of the time. Shostrom played a less effective game than when he trimmed young Eddie Moylan, of Trenton, N. J., to enter the final bout.

Miss Germaine, for nearly 10 years a contestant in public parks events, never gave her opponent a chance. Using the powerful forehand drives with which she ousted Mrs. Marta Barnett Andrade, of Jacksonville, Fla., the defending champion, the New Yorker built up an early lead and never was in danger of losing a set.

Hamper Wins Amateur

St. Paul, Aug. 25 (AP).—Tommy Hamper, jr., St. Paul, today won the Minnesota State Amateur Golf championship at the White Bear Yacht Club course, defeating Virgil Roby, Minneapolis, 3 and 1, in the finals.

Bosox Shell Browns After Losing Opener

Boston Wins, 17-3, To Avenge St. Louis' 7-2 Victory in First

By International News Service

Boston, Aug. 25.—The Boston Red Sox maintained their grip on the first division of the American League today by walloping the St. Louis Browns, 17 to 3, in an abbreviated nightcap after dropping the twin bill opener, 7 to 2.

With the fifth-place Chicago White Sox threatening to oust the Boston Boys from their fourth place perch, the Red Sox rolled out their artillery in the second contest to pound four St. Louis pitchers for 15 hits. Jimmy Foxx clouted his thirty-fourth homer in the sixth frame when Croninmen clinched the tilt with an 11-run spree.

In the opener, Johnny Niggeling scattered eight Boston hits. The veteran knuckle ball hurler kept the Red Sox sluggers well in check except in the fifth inning, when he lost control and forced in a run. The other run scored by the Red Sox in the fourth frame resulted from an error by Catcher Susce.

Former Redskin Bandsman Is Dead

Funeral arrangements for John Wilson Hayes, 49, former member of the Washington Redskins band who died Saturday at Mount Alto Hospital, are unsettled.

The body of Mr. Hayes, a World War veteran of American-Indian extraction, will either be shipped to Turtle Reservation, N. Dak., his last place of residence, or buried here at Arlington with military honors. His remains are at Chamber's, 3072 M street northwest.

Mr. Hayes was born in Rollo, N. Dak., and is survived by his wife, Marie.

Leo Jarboe Sets W. B. C. Swimming Record

Leo Jarboe, 13-year-old swimming star, set a new pool record Saturday, as the Boys Club of Washington, Eastern Branch, held its annual members' swimming and diving meet. He swam the 25-yard breastroke event in 14.9 seconds.

A second record was hung up by Joe Redman in the 100-yard breaststroke in the time of 1 minute 17.8 seconds. Young Jarboe also won the 50-yard freestyle and the fancy diving.

Pop Cooper's Tops II Wins At Red Bank

Hydroplane Scores As Bigger Craft Fail to Finish

By the Associated Press

Red Bank, N. J., Aug. 25.—Jack (Pop) Cooper, veteran Kansas City speedboat driver, sent his 225-cubic inch hydroplane Tops III across the North Shrewsbury River at a 70-mile-an-hour clip today to win the National Sweepstakes race as the bigger, faster craft failed to finish.

Herbert Mendelson's Notre Dame, the big Gold Cup racer from Detroit, which won yesterday's opening heat in record time, couldn't finish the second heat today. George Cannon's Grey Goose, of New Rochelle, N. Y., also dropped out after leading the way on the first lap.

Miss Fireball, driven by Jack Wood, of Detroit, was the only other boat to race in the final heat and thus earned second place in the final standing.

Cooper also won the 225-cubic inch championship race by taking today's two heats in record time after finishing third in the first heat yesterday.

Tops III couldn't equal the one-lap and one-heat records established by Notre Dame yesterday, but Cooper managed to set one record and equal another in his two triumphs.

His average sped of 66.809 miles an hour for the three 15-mile heats wiped out the record of 62.199 he set in his older boat, Tops II, in 1937. His speed of 70.810 miles an hour for the third heat of the "225" race equaled the world record for boats of that class. Tops III hit a high mark of 76.271 miles an hour for one lap of the final heat of the sweepstake, as compared to the lap record of 76.923 made by Notre Dame Saturday.

Notre Dame broke its drive shaft on the first turn yesterday. Part of the shaft went through the boat's hull and the craft was quickly towed to shore by Coast Guard vessels. Jim Finley, of Detroit, who was riding with Notre Dame's driver, Dan Arena, of Oakland, Calif., was thrown clear of the boat, but was unhurt. The Gray Goose III was forced out in the same heat because of motor trouble.

A. Mortimer Auerbach, of Atlantic City, owner of Emancipator VIII, conceded the 135-cubic-inch hydroplane championship to Henry Davis, jr., of Granogue, Del., owner and driver of Eight Ball III, after a meeting with the judges. Auerbach, Davis and Edison Hedges, of Atlantic City, owner of Little Eagles, were called to the judges' barge as a result of yesterday's first heat, when Auerbach dropped out to rescue Andy Crawford, who Ednandy sank after a collision. Auerbach came back today with a second and first in the final two heats. In conceding to the title, he admitted the Eight Ball was the fastest boat in the race.

Buford Nine Wins In Semipro Play

Wichita, Kans., Aug. 25 (AP).—Buford, Ga., 1938 champions, converted ten hits into as many runs in seven innings today, to eliminate El Dorado, Kans., from the National Semipro Baseball Tournament.

With the score 10 to 2, the game was called at that stage, because of a tournament eight-run lead rule. Six of the Georgia batters hit safely, including a triple by Right-fielder Baxter and a double by Second-sacker Shipley.

In the first game on the day's program, Tom Angley's three home runs in consecutive times at bat sparked Houston, Tex., to a 9-to-3 victory over Lancaster, S. C.

World's Record For Tuna Is Set

Newburyport, Mass., Aug. 25 (INS). Dr. John B. Vernaglia, of Medford, set a new world's record today by catching a 927-pound tuna. He used a rod and reel.

His catch bettered by 63 pounds the previous record of 864 pounds established in 1938 at Jordan Bay, N. S. Dr. Vernaglia used silver hake for bait and took 3 hours and 15 minutes to bring the fish to gaff. The tuna towed his boat 15 miles.

It was 10 feet 3 inches in length, had an 80-inch girth and 37-inch tailspread.

Juniors, Klegs Split

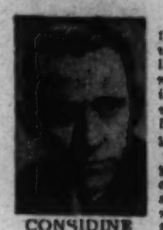
Seat Pleasant Juniors earned a split decision with the Klegs nine yesterday, taking the opener, 6-0, and losing the finale, 10-2. Pitcher Asquith was credited with a no-hit, no-run game in the first battle though he walked eight men and eight errors were made behind him.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Aug. 25.—It would seem to us that this might be a good time for the Cleveland Indians to sign another petition. Something along these lines:

"Dear Oscar Vitt:



CONSIDINE

"We want to beg your pardon for the shabby treatment we gave you a couple of months ago, when we signed a statement asking for your release as manager. We said that you got on our nerves and made nervous wrecks out of us. But as it turned out the only thing you were doing for us was giving us the impetus to become what looks like the first Cleveland pennant winner in 20 years.

"We were dumb, Al. We didn't recognize that you were jabbing us out of the torpor that has afflicted Cleveland teams for many years, stifling some fine ball clubs. You 'irritated' us into what may mean $6,000 extra dough for each one of us this year, and we're heartily sorry that we squawked at the inception of that jabbing.

"It's asking a lot of you, to forgive us. But you were a good sport at the time we were battling you, and we hope that out of the goodness of your heart you'll be a good sport again.

"Sincerely (and keep spurring us)

"Bobby Feller, Hal Trosky, Rollie Hemsley, Roy Weatherly, etc., etc."

Some of the boys around Jacobs Beach were talking the other day about the so-called favoritism shown by certain New York referees. Nate Lewis, fresh in from Chicago, listened a while and then held up a hand for silence.

"You fellows don't know what partiality means," he snapped. "The all-time record was set the night some unknown fellow knocked the great Kid McCoy down, and out, in the first round. The referee, who was McCoy's man, couldn't believe his eyes. Anyway, he just stared at the kid, lying there on the floor, and he must have stared a good minute before he began to count. Then he got down on his knees, put his lips against the kid's ear and bellowed the count as loud as he could roar, trying to wake the kid up.

"By the time the count got to five the referee was out of breath, and the kid was still out. So the referee stopped yelling, and after 'six!' he leaned over and bit the kid on the ear, and chawed that ear to a hamburger before he finally had to say "ten and out!"

IF THE YANKS are suffering from poliomyelitis, what fearful ailment is afflicting the Phillies.

EXCERPT FROM A LETTER from Ted Broadribb, famous English boxing authority, to Nat Fleischer, editor of The Ring: "I do trust that we will be spared so that once again we can renew friendships in your country. I'm looking forward to Sam Taub's description of the Conn-Pastor fight. I think Conn will win, and that Pastor will appear to be much below his proper form. I consider Billy Conn the classiest little big man since Tom Gibbons. He'll make the present crop of heavies look very moderate. Given the strength of a Dempsey, Conn would be the most outstanding heavyweight champion of my time. If he can gain weight and strength he is without a doubt the one man to succeed Joe Louis. Whether he is at the moment strong enough, I am not in a position to know, but I feel certain that he will outclass even Louis in ability until weight and strength plays its part."

Bitsy Grant Upset in Net Tournament

Atlantan Bows in Canadian Play to George Foley, of Miami

By the Associated Press

Quebec, Aug. 25.—George Toley, of Miami, Fla., upset the favored Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, 8-6, 6-4 today to capture the singles title in the Seignior Club's annual invitation tennis tournament.

The veteran Grant came back later, however, to team with J. Gilbert Hall, of East Orange, N. J., and win the doubles crown by defeating Charles Mattman, of Los Angeles, and Bob Harman, of Berkeley, Calif., 8-6, 7-5.

In the first set of singles, Grant ran off the first five games and appeared headed for victory. Toley came back to take the next six, and, after Grant tied the count at 6-all, the Miamian broke service and held his own for the set. The second set went to 4-all and then Toley ran the next two games to capture the Allan McMartin trophy.

Scalzo and Perrin Meet Tonight

New Orleans, Aug. 25 (INS).—Petey Scalzo, featherweight boxing champion recognized by the National Boxing Association, meets Jimmy Perrin, of New Orleans, in a 10-round decision match in City Park Stadium tomorrow night.

Perrin is "world featherweight champion" of the Louisiana Boxing Commission. Scalzo's title will not be at stake.

Pat Martino, Billy Houghton Pace Capital Club Qualifying

Anacostia Team Wins 11th Match of Year; Beats Indianhead

Cooper Loses Chance for Argyle Medal; Underwood Wins Greens Committee Cup; Gileses Win Husband and Wife Tourney

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Pat Martino and former champ Billy Houghton were the only 80 breakers in the first day's qualifying in the Capital Club championship yesterday, Martino completing his 36-hole medal test with a 146 total while Houghton posted a 73 for the first round.

While the afternoon rain sent most of the scores soaring, it seemed to help Martino. He was 76, six over par in the morning under perfect weather conditions but his post-lunch round was an even par 70.

Houghton needs a 73 to tie or a 72 to take over first place in the last week-end of qualifying, next Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Match play starts September 8.

Former champion Bill Pendergast was among the 80 shooters that included C. Henry Cohen, Buster Mrstik and Frank Durham. C. P. Redick and J. L. Pimper were next with 81's. Defending champion Frank White is exempt from qualifying.

H. L. Hines scored his first hole-in-one at Capital, a 5-iron shot that found the cup on the 165-yard eleventh hole while playing with his son, Charles, and R. N. Weisberg and his son Allan.

Frank Hanrahan and Frank Gradoville advanced to the finals in the Barry Pate Cup two-man team championsaip, defeating John Phelan and Bob Seibold, 4 and 3. W. C. Brewer and George Keene made the title round in the other bracket with a 2 and 1 triumph over William Samford and H. Bahr.

Grafton Lumsdon, a 13-year-old caddy, played a remarkable round for a boy of that age, an 80, to win medal honors in the club caddy championship. Match play starts this week.

ANACOSTIA

Clay Bragg reported Anacostia's eleventh triumph in twelve team matches this season, an easy 24½ to 5½ victory over the visiting Officer's Club team of Indian Head, Md.

W. W. Seay's even 70 was the best score of the match while two of the visitors scored eagles, B. R. Dunn on the tenth hole and Paul Poser on the fourteenth. The winners were hosts at a dinner at the Holbrook Farms Dairy, with Zane Kelly, chairman of the committee.

Rock Creek has not yet answered Anacostia's challenge for another intracity public links match and unless Bragg is contacted by the uptown boys this week he will go ahead and make arrangements with East Potomac for the final match of the series around the middle of September.

The Davis Cup standing to date is:

	W.	L.	Points
Anacostia	3	1	101½
East Potomac	2	2	83½
Rock Creek	0	2	28

Results of the Anacostia-Indian Head match:

Anacostia, 24½; Indianhead, 5½.

J. E. Gregory and Clay Bragg (A) scored 2½ points to ½ for Ben Mason and Alfred Ward; Jump Hazelton and Tom Smith (A) scored 2 points to 1 for Eddie Koehler and Harry Coleman; Orval Brown and Harry Bragg (A) scored 3 points to 0 for B. R. Dunn and Peter Reklis, hr.; Matt Keogh and Dutch Melcher (A) scored 3 points to 0 for Paul Posey and Arthur Wilroy; Buck Freeman and Bill Davis (A) scored 3 points to 0 for Eddie Lamb and John Thomas; W. W. Seay and Earl Bean (A) scored 3 points to 0 for Jim Busey and Herb Miller.

Al Gurette and Cal Loving (A) scored 2 points to 1 for C. J. Broyles and Walter Robey; Jack Hardy and Melvin Luikat (A) scored 3 points to 0 for Guy Keirn and George N. Nairn; Mutt Tawney and Fred Kimball (A) scored 3 points to 0 for Harry Davis and Roy Whitlock; Glen Russell and Vernon Woodard (A) scored 0 points to 3 for Peter Reklis, Jr., and Charles Wills.

ARGYLE

Maury Cooper had a chance to take over medal honors in the Argyle Club championship qualifying yesterday after playing six holes in one under par figures but he ran into trouble on seven and nine to go out in 38 and then came back in 39 for a 77. John Holzberg and J. E. Duffy are tied for the medal with one week left for qualifying, with 74s.

With 55 members having turned in scores thus far, 79 is the likely score to make the championship flight. Fred Murray added his 79 to the growing list yesterday.

F. E. Manning advanced to the finals of the club senior championship, where he will meet R. J. Posson for the title.

CONGRESSIONAL

Yesterday was executive's day at Congressional as only C. M. Underwood separated the various club officers from a sweep of the first four prizes in the Greens Committee Tournament. Underwood scored 84-16, 68, for low net of the day.

Dr. Robert A. Keilty, club secretary, won low net in Class A with 81-10, 71, while Myron Davy president of Congressional, was low in Class B with 81-12, 69, and Greens Committee Chairman Frank Murray was low in Class C with 87-17, 80. J. F. Tracy completed the prize list with 100-27, 73, low in Class D.

O. H. Ritenour banged out a good drive on the par four fifteenth hole and then dropped an eight-iron shot in the cup for an eagle deuce.

KENWOOD

George Vass, jr., and G. A. Phillips, armed with 9 and 13 handicaps, respectively, tied in the Kenwood match play against par tournament, each beating perfect figures 5 up. R. G. Peebles and Dr. F. S. Bacon tied for second, 4 up, and H. W. Sharpe and H. T. Morse tied for third, 3 up. Maury Fitzgerald, J. C. Foulis and W. J. Snow were all in the prize list, all finishing 2 up.

An alternate shot round of 77 by Fitzgerald and Mrs. Betty Mackley won the Mixed Scotch Foursome Tournament. Mrs. V. G. Myers and Dr. L. B. Gaffney won low net, 93-19, 74, over Mrs. A. A. McEntee and Charles L. Vaile, with 84-9, 75.

MANOR

Carl Willingham was a one-man, two-man team all by himself yesterday at Manor as he pulled his partner, Lee Ritter, and himself into the semifinals of the two-man team match play tournament.

Willingham and Ritter were all even with Dr. H. J. Beech and A. L. Rinaudot after 18 holes last week and had no time to play off the tie. They set the playoff for yesterday, and in the meantime Ritter went away on his vacation.

So Willingham went out to play the three-hole playoff against the other two and at the end of the three holes they were still even, due to Carl's chip shot in the cup for a birdie on the first hole. They played two more holes and were still all square, and then Willingham finally won the match on the twenty-fifth, 1 up.

In the other match played Bobby Brownell and M. Whittlesley advanced with a 4 and 3 victory over A. F. MacDougald and D. R. Hutchison, last year's finalists.

Edward H. Teague holed a second shot for an eagle deuce on the seventh hole, while playing with J. E. Nell and Joseph Ebert.

BEAVER DAM

Forrest Thompson won low gross in the sweepstakes play with a 76, while S. T. Dale was low net with 80-8—72.

Mr. and Mrs. K. S. Giles won the Indian Spring Husband-and-Wife championship with a net 150 score, over a field of 18 teams. Mrs. Giles scored 87-7—80, and Mr. Giles 82-12—70, for the winning total.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. McCarthy were second, the former scoring 113-36—77, and Mrs. McCarthy 101-26—75, for a net 152 total. The third-place team was Mr. and Mrs. Ralph G. Sias.

CHEVY CHASE

At least 30 of the amateurs entered in the National Amateur sectional qualifying rounds tomorrow at Chevy Chase are expected to iest the layout today in a practice round.

According to Assistant Pro Buck Worsham, the course is a different layout than when the Invitation Tournament was played there in the spring, several strokes on the harder and longer side, and the boys can come home with a pair of 76's tomorrow and feel reasonably safe of grabbing one of the six places to the national championship.

Dr. R. A. Keilty and other Maryland State Golf Association officials will meet with Robert Stead, jr., today on the placing of the tees and pins and local rules.

Pro-Amateur Today In Winchester, Va.

Due to conflicting with the National P. G. A. championship and the national amateur qualifying rounds, the Middle Atlantic Pro-Amateur Tournament today at Winchester, Va., will draw only three Washington professionals, George Diffenbaugh, Leo Walper and Al Houghton.

Furnituremen, Needing Victory for Title, Lead 7-0 in Fifth When Rain Postpones Game With Flood; Plaza Tile Victor

One-half of an inning stood between Miller Furniture diamonders and the second-half title in the National City A League yesterday, rain causing postponement of the team's crucial battle with J. C. Flood midway of the fifth inning.

At the time the Furnituremen were out front, 7-0, with Pitcher Lanny Birch in complete control of things.

Miller will try again Sunday for the victory which will earn a play-off with Klein Tavern for the league championship.

In B Section, Plaza Tile, first-half winner, eliminated St. Francis Xavier with a 6-5 victory. Taylor held the losers to eight hits in the six-inning playoff of a tie, fanned five and allowed only two bases on balls.

Cardinal A. C. dropped out of competition in the junior section when it lost to Friendship in an upset, 7-3. Naiman Photos remained at the top, swamping Woodridge, 10-2 and Kneessi Cubs were only a half game back after a 4-1 beating of Uline Ice.

Johnstons Win Maryland Golf Tourney

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Aug. 25.—William H. and Eddie Johnston, of the Terra Mariae Club here, won the Maryland State Golf Association Father-and-Son championship here today at Elkridge for a second time.

The Johnstons, champions in 1938, posted a winning 75 and with a seven handicap off their score for 75-7, 68 they won both gross and net prizes. Eddie is the Maryland State Intercollegiate champion and captained the Baltimore junior golfers to a victory over the Washington juniors last week.

The tournament was played alternate shots, with the sons driving off the odd holes and the fathers off the even.

The two-time champions and favorites from Washington, J. V. and Bobby Brownell, of Manor, finished out of the prize list with an even 80.

The other District teams, both from Manor, were J. R. and Dick Meyer, 86, and L. J. and Norman Manders, 93. The Argyle team of E. S. and Bill Cassedy withdrew.

France Suppresses All Professional Sports But One

Vichy, France, Aug. 25.—Minister of Youth Jean Ybarnegaray today announced thesuppression of professional boxing, wrestling, soccer, rugby and all other paid sports except cycling, which will be allowed to continue pending a definite status.

At the same time the minister limited organized athletics to one club in towns of less than 50,000 population to eliminate interclub rivalry.

The French type of rugby played with 13 players was wholly suppressed because it is played only professionally.

The government also ordered newspaper sportswriters to reduce the space of sports and cease lauding the merits of individual players whom Ybarnegaray complained received personal glorification in the newspapers far in excess of the importance of their accomplishments in comparison with scientists and inventors.

To enable France to compete internationally in sports, the government will create "state athletics" to form national teams.

Doctor Pulls In 927-Pound Tuna

Newburyport, Mass., Aug. 25 (AP).—A 927-pound tuna—believed one of the largest ever caught with rod and reel—was brought to gaff after more than a three-hour battle today off Plum Island Point.

Dr. John B. Vernnelia, of Medford, made the catch while fishing with friends. The tuna was 10 feet long and had a tail spread of 37 inches.

Demaree's 68 Paces P.G.A. Trial Round

Picard Cards 69, Hogan Has Two 70s Before Laid Low By Neck Injury

By the Associated Press

Hershey, Pa., Aug. 25.—The top-notchers of professional golf wound up today final rehearsals for their annual fling at the P. G. A. match play championship with most of them none too confident the 7,000 yard Hershey layout would yield to fancy scoring sprees.

Last minute tuneups for the qualifying rounds, which start tomorrow morning, were played under a light steady rain that, in effect, added even more yards to the course.

The brigade of 130, largest field in the tournament since it first was held in 1916, came to the wire with the knowledge that only a handful of them in three or four days of drills managed to give par 73 a better than fair battle.

Demaret Fires 68

Arriving only today, Slammin' Sammy Snead who goes into most tournaments the top-heavy favorite, slashed around nine holes in four under par.

Two 18-hole rounds Monday and Tuesday will cut the field to 64, including Picard who is exempt from qualifying for the matches because of his triumph last year at Pomonok, Long Island.

This group of survivors engages in two 18-hole matches Wednesday. Thirty-six-hole matches follow Thursday, with the quarter-finals Friday, semifinals Saturday and the two-man finals Sunday.

Hogan Inspired

Rated at five to one, Snead was a notch over blonde Craig Wood and Hogan, who also belt them a mile when they're swinging right. Hogan nearly slipped out of the tournament with a neck injury but after hospital treatment last night was confident the incident was only a trifle.

Seven of the 12 past P. G. A. winners were on hand, including Walter Hagen, five-time champion. His record of 38 matches won and only nine lost in this tournament dominates the association's history.

The others are Johnny Revolta (1935), Paul Runyan (1934-38), Leo Diegel (1928-29), Denny Shute (1936-37), Jim Barnes (1916-19), and Picard.

Worsham, Larkin End Practice

Washington, D. C.'s hopes for the championship, Lewis Worsham, jr., of the Burning Tree Club, and Gene Larkin, Woodmont, completed two days of practice over the long layout and are all set to make their debuts in the tournament tomorrow.

Worsham will leave the tee at 11:20 in the company of Herman Keiser and James Geogehan, while Larkin will play at 12:51 with two California pros, H. Oblity, jr., and Clayton Aleridge.

The other Middle Atlantic entrants are Bobby Cruickshank, of Richmond, and Errie Ball, of Charlottesville.

Sandlot Nines Launch District Title Tournament

With their hopes pinned on a trip to Birmingham, Ala., where the National Amateur Baseball Federation will hold its annual tournament starting September 5, two D. C. sandlot champions today launch a local elimination series.

Heurich Brewers, defending champions for the last three years, square off with St. Elizabeth's in the first clash, listed for the South Ellipse at 4 p. m. The defenders, who recently won The Washington Post Industrial League title with a spectacular comeback, will be favored over the Saints, winners of the U. S. Militia League title.

To the victor today goes a meeting with Pepco, U. S. Government League champ, on Tuesday. Two losses will be necessary before a team is eliminated. Action will be continued each day until a winner is decided. A slight charge will be asked of fans at each game.

Hopewell Man Wins State Rifle Title

National Capital Club of Washington Takes Team Crown

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Aug. 25.—R. W. Livingston, jr., of Hopewell, today won the Virginia small bore rifle championship over a fast field at the range of the Cavalier Rifle and Pistol Club, scoring 1,987 points out of a possible 2,000. He led his nearest competitor, Captain Robert C. Andrews, of Fort Bragg, N. C., by the margin of a single point.

The Hopewell rifle expert also won a second leg on the Cavalier Cup, which must be won three times to become the permanent possession of a contestant. His score was 1,192 out of a possible 1,200 points and Captain Andrews was again second by the margin of one point.

Considering wind and lighting conditions at the range, the shooting yesterday was unusually good and a number of contestants scored possibles in individual matches. Both the state championship and the Cavalier Cup were awarded on the basis of aggregate scores in a number of matches, designed to bring out the ability of the shooter at various ranges.

The four-man team event was won by the National Capital Rifle Club, of Washington, with two ladies on the team. The winners were Miss Ruth Nalls, Mrs. L. L. McDonie, Mr. Yocum and Mr. Hanson. The Portsmouth Rifle and Pistol Club was second, trailing by 3 points.

H. J. E. Reid, engineer in charge of the National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics Laboratory at Langley Field, scored 400 out of a possible 400 points to win the Dewar Match, which consisted of 20 shots at 50 yards and 20 shots at 100 yards.

The Mills Trophy was won by H. E. Riley, of Arlington, in the matches Saturday afternoon. Like the State Championship, the Cavalier Cup matches fired today the Mills Trophy is awarded as an aggregate of a number of matches and was fired from prone, sitting, kneeling and standing positions.

Joe Louis' Protege Held Slight Choice Over New Yorker

Izzy Jannazzo yesterday tapered off training for his ten-round welterweight bout with Holman Williams tonight at Griffith Stadium with a mild workout at Turner's Arena while his foe idled, satisfied he is in the best of condition.

Williams probably will enter the ring a slight choice, having defeated Jannazzo in a close fight about a year ago, but the New Yorker is known as a spoiler of favorites.

Jannazzo especially is remembered here for smashing a long Phil Furr winning streak here several years ago, when the District welter had been installed the heavy choice.

Tonight's feature battle promises to be a punching duel with no quarter asked and none given. The managers of the principals in the District's fifth mixed bout have told their charges to shoot the works, for a crack at Welterweight Champion Henry Armstrong may await the winner. Jannazzo is ranked fourth by the National Boxing Association, while Williams is the third ranking contender.

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez has arranged an attractive set of preliminaries to support the main bout. The card will open with a four-rounder between Jimmy Green and Jabo Keener, both of Washington.

The seminfinal, over six rounds, will bring together Tommy Kiene, of Savannah, who seeks his sixty-third victory, against Joey Puig. Two other six-round bouts will pit Tony Novello, of New York, and Billy Banks, of Washington, and Carl Stein, of New York, and Justo Jiminez, of Mexico City.

Cubs, Giants Split Even In Two Games

Raffensberger Wins, 5-4, Loses by 12-8 as Relief Moundsman

By International News Service

Chicago, Aug. 25.—In a relief role, Kenny Raffensberger won and lost a game today as the Chicago Cubs defeated the New York Giants, 5 to 4, in the opener, and lost the nightcap, 12 to 8, before 18,000 fans.

The Cubs trotted out five hurlers in the finale, attempting to halt the murderous 18-hit barrage of the Giants. Mel Ott homered in the sixth, his second for the day, and Young added another for the Giants in the seventh. Billy Nicholson connected for the lone Cub homer in the seventh. The Giants annexed four runs in the seventh to give them a 10-to-8 lead. But added two more in the next stanza to put the game safely away.

The Cubs came from behind three times to win the opener. With the game tied up at three-all at the close of the ninth, the Giants almost won in the tenth as Babe Young singled to bring home Johnny Rucker. Dom Dallassandro broke up the game in the last half by lining out a double with the bases loaded. Ott connected for his first homer in the sixth.

Three Havre de Grace Race Specials Draw 132 Nominations

66 Named For $10,000 Chesapeake

Potomac Handicap Lures 40; Leading Stables Represented; Meet Opens Sept. 14

Special Dispatch to The Post

Havre de Grace, Md., Aug. 2.—The country's representative horsewomen and horsemen have named 135 thoroughbreds of various ages for the three famous specials that will be renewed here by the Harford Agricultural and Breeder's Association in the course of thirteen days' racing that will begin Saturday, September 14.

The $10,000 Chesapeake, a dash of six furlongs for two-year-olds, has attracted sixty-six; the $10,000 Potomac, a handicap of one mile and a sixteenth for three-year-olds, exclusively, forty; the $15,000 Havre de Grace, a handicap of one mile and a furlong for three-year-olds and over, twenty-six. And all of these nominations are ready for the colors save the Preakness and Belmont winner of last spring, Bimelech.

Officials Enthused

General Manager Edward Burke and Racing Secretary Charles McLennan are eminently satisfied. They promise racing for the horse folk of this area up to the best traditions of the sport anywhere. The Eastern Shore will be the salutatory attraction, the Potomac will be renewed Saturday, September 21, the Havre de Grace will be the valedictory number Saturday, September 28.

More than $600,000 will be distributed in the racing here and the sport that will follow at Laurel, in October, and at Pimlico and Bowie, in November. Havre de Grace's minimum purse will be $1,000, and there will be allowance and condition races and handicaps of $1,500, $1,800, $2,000 and $2,500 besides the stake renewals.

Superintendent James Ross has had the going, of the beautifully situated course that occpies a low promontory which looks out over the famous Susquehanna ducking flats, in fine condition for some weeks now, and horses preparing for the coming racing are already galloping over it. Ross has provided stabling for more than 800 animals.

Largest White Marlin of the Season

Bill Ackerman On Fishing

100 Marlins Caught Off Ocean City; Count Below '38-'39

In actual figures the marlin count at Ocean City is just an even hundred—one-thirteenth of the number boated or released last season at this time.

This hundreth fish, boated by Capt. Lev Raymond on the Lev-Lou, was the only marlin brought into port on Wednesday. It weighed 57 pounds and was the fourth single he has boated. It is also his seventh of the 1940 season and ties him with Capt. Ches Gray for the highest total of any boat.

ACKERMAN

That is not very many when compared with the number caught in 1939 and 1938, but still good compared to other fishing ports in a normal season. And the season here isn't over by any means. Given the good weather that we have every reason to expect during the next three weeks, it is possible another hundred, or even more, might be caught for with so long an northeaster this month it hardly seems likely the usual early September blow that always scatters the fish will put in its appearance on time.

The outstanding happening in the fleet on Wednesday wasn't the lone white marlin boated, or the first albacore of the season weighing 15 pounds, also caught by Raymond, or even the two large Allison tuna that were hooked and lost. No sir, it was none of these. It was no less than the hooking of a large blue marlin by Capt. Ches Gray on the Hilda, that was variously estimated to weigh between four and five hundred pounds.

Ches Gray, knows his marlin and with the first jump he had called the weight, and then he was compelled to stand by and watch the big fish thoroughly and completely wreck a good rod and reel before he was on his way.

Blue marlin have been hooked before, and been seen surfacing, but unless they are hooked deep there is little hope of bringing a big one in on the tackle in general use for the white marlin.

Paul and Jack Townsend use 10-ounce Tycoon tips with 15-thread line, in spite of the fact that many anglers believe it too heavy for a finished angler to use on white marlin.

It was with this in mind that we recommended the same size rods when Frank O'Brien wanted to make up two Tycoons to be awarded to the sportsman and sportswoman, catching and releasing the greatest number of white marlin this season.

A 10-ounce Tycoon, with a good man, or woman, on the butt-end, will bring to boat most anything they hang to its business end, and yet it is light and sporty enough for the general run of smaller fish.

It wasn't many days ago Mrs. C. L. "Peggy" Parker, hung on to a fair-sized mako shark with an identical Tycoon tip, and in pumping up put so much set in the rod everyone thought it was ruined. Hung up only overnight, it was back in shape and ready for more in the morning. We hope it is on such the next big blue is hooked.

Handles Marlboro's Betting

J. DONALD HAY,

mutuel manager and in charge of the record betting at the present Marlboro meeting. Hay's efficient crew handled the record play of $158,336 last Saturday, a jump of almost $40,000 over the similar day last year. The betting for the ten-day session is expected to top the million-dollar mark. Hay also is in charge of wagering at Bowie, Charles Town and other tracks and worked his way up from the ranks. Baltimore is his home.

Selections at Marlboro

Dear Al:

It looks as though Galt Davis knew what he was doing when he sold Spotless for $1,000 at Charles Town. Spotless, after getting nothing while racing around Ohio, bowed a tendon. Attention jockeys: When you pull up horses please don't saw on their mouths and try to stop them on a dime. A lot of good horses are ruined that way. Besides the officials are liable to slap a fine on you. Attention Clymene bettors: We didn't have any excuse in that race last Saturday. Counter Pass is just a fit mare. The horse Red Wrack is consistent in that he wins every other race. When he gets beat the excuse is that he lugs in. However, he has overcome that fault to win five races this year in ten starts. Who took the horse off the top of the Marlboro Hotel trophy? Jockey Mike Sarno took off 10 pounds to make weight last Saturday. Steeplechase Jockey Norman Brooks rode Delhi Dan on the week-end card. Too bad the colored boy can't make less than 120 pounds, because he still is a good flat rider. At the present rate of betting, Marlboro should show a profit of about 75 grand for the 10-day meeting, which isn't hay. However, the mutuel manager is Donald Hay. There is no truth in the report that Peg Hanna has a picture of a bucket of oats that he puts in Chief Evergreen's stall twice a day. The white-faced bum goes again today. If you know how the Bennings selections made out Saturday, say nothing. I will see you later. Mowmart was just about the hottest thing that has popped up at this meeting. I must confess that I fell for a gander or two. If the boy publisher don't stop ducking baseball for the races, I'm going to tell Papa Griffith. Long time no see, the good sport Mrs. B. Marlboro is like jail—easy to get into but hard to get out of. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—The Hughes-Jackson entry of Distant Star and Tou Line seems well placed in the day's opener. Either one could turn the trick, I believe. Ophelia II has had a rest and should give a good account of herself. Triphammer won here last out.

Second race—Shorts probably has too much speed for this gang. Promises to get the right ride and I'm going to string along. Redfoot has worked well and should be close. Square Play will like the track and is a possible spprise.

Third race—Albert D., a horse once reported dead, will be very much alive in this company. A brisk worker, this one meets the right company. Briar Bird has speed and will be dangerous if in action. Heraldic has a shade of class.

Fourth race—Navigation seems the best of the Maryland-breds gathered for this event. Should make the most of the rail position. Julie Macaw won on an off track at Bel Air and should like the Marlboro going. More Poise is a threat even at the short route.

Fifth race—It begins to look as though I'm trying to run this one down, but I'm going to Worthowning in this rather open race. Appears capable of handling the 113-pound assignment. Peice Lad is fit as hands make horses. Brazen Hussy is in light.

Sixth race—Dacotah is a doubtful starter, but is fit now and will be right there if sent postward in this company. Lady Solace and Chief Evergreen, also on the reserve list, will be in the thick of contention if sent postward. Of those assured a starting position, Speed Ship, War Port and My Sweets look best.

Seventh race—Last Scamp found the opposition a bit too stiff last out. Better suited by conditions here and I see no reason for mistakes. Playdema showed life last out. Peetomar for the show end.

Best bet—Last Scamp.

2-Year-Old Turf Picture Is Scrambled

One Thing Is Certain, However, Howard Is 'Luckiest Guy' In Racing Circles

By Sid Feder
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Aug. 25.—The 2-year-old championship is going begging so far in the turf world this season, but one title more firmly established than ever by the latest in juvenile doings is Charley Howard's ranking as the "luckiest guy in racing."

For the first time in three seasons there isn't another Man o' War on the way up, because just about all of the good 2-year-olds have been knocked off along the way. The latest favorites to give the bookies sweet dreams were Warren Wright's well-regarded Whirlaway and Cleaveland Putnam's Arlington Futurity winner, Swain, who couldn't click in the Grand Union at Saratoga and the Futurity at Washington Park, respectively.

Howard Lucky

Outside of E. K. Bryson's unbeaten Magic Stream, the first son of Coldstream to make good, there isn't another 2-year-old around who follows in the all-victorious 2-year-old footsteps of Bimelech in '39 and El Chico the year before him as the horse to watch when he grows up.

Yet, while the Washington futurity was one of the races which put the whammy on two-year-old title hopes of Swain and Alf Vanderbilt's Good Turn, it only served to give Lady Luck another chance to smile at Charley Howard. Piled on top of such other successful thoroughbred investments as Seabiscuit, Kayak II and Mioland, it probably set Charley to wondering again why he'd spent so many years selling automobiles on the Pacific coast while it was so much easier to race horses.

For Charley sent out Porter's Cap, a 13-1 shot who had never even gone to the post in a stake race before, and the little chestnut son of the Porter came bouncing home by a neck to pick up the winner's end of $30,750. This placed him second to Swain among the year's juvenile money winners. Swain finished a dismal fifth, one notch lower than Good Turn.

Cost Only $1,300

Porter's Cap represented just $1,300 of Charley's money. That's all he paid for the colt at the Saratoga sales last year, and if you don't think $30,750 is a fair return, you'd better find another auditor.

First it was Seabiscuit whom Charley picked up for a song, and the Biscuit collected a whole "opera," financially, for the Californian. Then it was Kayak II, and, more recently, Mioland, who has won about $70,000 since Howard bought him for $15,000 early this year.

As for the Grand Union, Whirlaway tried his usual stretch run, but is wasn't enough this time to catch Alf Vanderbilt's New World, who won by a length and a half to collect the $10,050 winner's end. In all fairness, it must be pointed out that Whirlaway ran into all kinds of trouble—but New World was on top at the finish, and that's where they pay off, even with the mutuels.

Judge Shehan Dies After Heart Attack

Funeral Services For Eastern Shore Jurist Tomorrow

Easton, Md., Aug. 25 (AP).—W. Mason Shehan, chief judge of the Second Judicial Circuit Court and for years one of the Eastern Shore's most prominent residents, died this morning of a heart attack.

Judge Shehan, 67, had suffered from a heart ailment for some time, but had not been confined to his home and only last night was visiting at the home of a friend.

He became ill about 1 a. m. after returning home, and summoned his son, George Phillip Shehan, and his daughter-in-law from a dance at the Country Club. He rallied from that attack, but was stricken again several hours later and died about 5:30 a. m.

Judge Shehan's wife was killed in an automobile accident in November, 1938. Friends said the jurist never fully recovered from the shock.

Besides his son, George, who with his bride of a few months lives at the Shehan home here, the judge is survived by another son, W. Mason Shehan, jr., who is in the Naval Air Corps and is now in Hawaii.

Judge Shehan was a former State insurance commissioner and president of the State Bar Association. He was elected judge in 1934. He was a native shoreman, born at Oxford in Talbot County. He started his legal career in the office of the late United States Senator Charles H. Gibson.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 2 p. m. at the Shehan residence.

Japanese Problem

By Roger W. Babson

Peace Conference NOW Urged

A poker game is on in earnest between Japan and the United States. We "opened" last summer with the cancellation of the trade treaty we signed in 1911. Then we "raised" the Japs with the license restrictions on arms and ammunition in May. Now we are raising the bid again by extending these restrictions to scrap iron and petroleum. Japan is boiling mad, but she is staying right in the game by threatening to grab the Dutch East Indies, source of our vital rubber supplies.

ROGER W. BABSON

We never worried much about Japan as long as the British could keep a weather eye peeled on the ambitious little fellow. It was, of course, hard for American missionaries to explain to wounded Chinese why Japan should be raping China with American genius, arms, and materials. But now with the Axis twisting the British lion's tail, it's a different story. The British Asiatic fleet still commands the vital Straits of Malacca, but can this fleet keep watch over the mighty Japanese navy while the British home fleet is battling for its life in the North Sea? This is the question which thinking people are asking here on the Pacific Coast.

IF THE British should be licked (and I don't believe they will be), part of our fleet would have to rush from the Pacific into the Atlantic. It is a cinch that the Japs would move quickly in such a contingency. If the British are not licked, even so the pressure on them will be terrific. They will find it hard to protect the Dutch East Indies even if they want to. The Japs know we would then be the only obstacle. Will they gamble on the chance that we won't act? Will they grab the Indies before we can move and hope that United States citizens will shrug their shoulders and mutter, "Why should American boys defend Dutch possessions in the far-off Orient?"

It seems a good question. Why should they? I will give you the reason. Can you imagine a United States motorized army of scout cars, trucks, airplanes, without rubber tires? Could the United States or Canadian industrial systems function with tireless automobiles, trucks and buses? I doubt it. We and our Canadian brothers must have rubber! Our new synthetic rubber—Ameripol—will not be ready in sufficient amount for several years. The Dutch East Indies are our principal source of natural rubber, although we get some from Africa and some from Brazil. So Japan is hiking our bid of an embargo on scrap iron and oil by getting set to pounce on the Dutch East Indies.

OF COURSE, President Roosevelt says it isn't an embargo. It is only a licensing system—but as exporters here in San Francisco say, "Try to get a license!" The license order does not say who it is aimed at, but exporters will tell you how quickly your application will get all snarled up in red tape if it is for permission to ship to Japan. This is a serious blow to Japan because she depends on our scrap and oil to build and fuel her growing war machine. We supply her with 70 and 90 per cent, respectively, of these materials.

Moreover, she depends on us to pay for her imports of scrap and oil through our gigantic purchases of silk. This end of the business does not look so good for the Japanese either. Japan really fears American chemistry rather than American diplomacy. Nylon is beginning to take the place of silk in women's hosiery. It already has taken over 10 per cent of the market. Cutting off our silk purchases can be a mortal wound to Japan because, license system or no license system, the foreign exchange necessary to purchase American scrap and oil would put a tremendous load on her already overstrained financial system.

IT IS EVIDENT, therefore, that the Japanese may, sooner or later, be forced to "shoot the works"—that is to risk war with Britain and the United States. Many a foreign observer believes we should beat her to the punch by starting now while she is embroiled in China, while Britain can help us, while Russia is still a menace to the Nipponese. At any rate, the fuel for a first-class United States-Japanese imbroglio is all there. Only thing lacking is the spark to set it off—and many a coast resident is fearful that spontaneous combustion may start it.

Meanwhile, the oil and scrap restrictions have hit United States business here on the coast harder than anywhere else. Japan has been taking over 60,000 barrels of oil per day—most of which is cleared through Los Angeles. While small as compared with national crude oil output, it bulked big in relation to California's already severely prorated output of 580,000 barrels daily. Shippers are not hurt by the oil restriction because most of it sailed in Nipponese tankers. Scrap restrictions cut just as much more into the bustle and hustle here on San Francisco's docks and freighters, already held down by the war and other fetters.

I AM, HOWEVER, all for the embargo license system or whatever you call it. I believe that the Japanese are as big a menace to us as the Nazis, and I am 100 per cent in favor of doing everything we can, short of war, to prevent them from going too far. If, however, war is inevitable, perhaps it had better come now than when the entire Axis group of nations are ready to put the screws on us. On the other hand, it seems as if, with all these nations worshiping the same God, there should be some way to settle these great problems without resort to war. Sometime Britain, Germany, Japan and the United States must sit around a conference table and settle things. Why not do it now?

Jones Likely To Fill Loan, Cabinet Posts

Texan Expected to Keep Present Duties if He Succeeds Hopkins

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Jesse H. Jones, it was reported last night in circles close to the man whom the New Deal has made the world's largest money lender, not only will become Secretary of Commerce in President Roosevelt's Cabinet, but will continue to exercise the multitudinous financial responsibilities which now fall upon him as Federal Loan Administrator.

The Cabinet post, which the White House disclosed Saturday has been offered to the Texas financier, is being relinquished by Harry L. Hopkins, former relief administrator and close friend of the President, because of prolonged ill health.

By accepting this job while retaining his powers as Federal Loan Administrator, it was pointed out, Jones would expand his influence in the National and Western Hemisphere defense programs.

Coincidentally, he would obtain a $3,000-a-year "raise in pay" for the addition of the Commerce Secretary's duties to his current responsibilities. As a Cabinet officer, the wealthy Texan would receive $15,000 a year as compared with his $12,000 a year as Federal Loan Administrator. Since no individual may receive two salaries from the Federal Government, he would have to be content with the Cabinet officer's salary.

Such multiplicity of titles and responsibilities as are contemplated in the reported plan for Jones, it was recalled, are not new in the New Deal Administration's plan of organization.

Harold L. Ickes, while Secretary of the Interior, also has been administrator of the Public Works Administration, administrator of the oil code, and Puerto Rican Reconstruction Administrator.

As Secretary of Commerce, it was pointed out, Jones would have to add to his responsibilities duties having a direct bearing on the Administration's efforts to speed up and coordinate industrial defense expansion activities.

As Federal Loan Administrator, he would have recently added responsibilities in the handling of authority for extending credits to aid the other Western Hemisphere nations in strengthening their economic and other defenses against potential Nazi penetrations.

In his capacity as Federal Loan Administrator, he has top supervision, not only of the RFC, but of the Electric Home and Farm Authority, the RFC Mortgage Co., the Disaster Loan Corporation, the Federal National Mortgage Association, the Federal Housing Administration, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corporation, and the Export-Import Bank, which the Administration is expanding to bolster the financing of its Latin American defense-cooperation program.

Jones Parries Queries

Petoskey, Mich., Aug. 25 (AP).—Jesse H. Jones Federal Loan Administrator, parried questions of newspapermen today as to whether he would accept the post of Secretary of Commerce offered him by President Roosevelt.

"Whom do you think I should tell first?" he shot back at interviewers who asked him whether he would succeed Harry Hopkins, who has resigned.

Bob Threadgill Wins Upset At D. C. Net

George Herbert Loses In Recreation Play; Hazel Bishopp Wins

Although halted by bad weather, the D. C. Recreation Department's annual open tennis tournament for men and women got in a few important licks yesterday before the rains came. Bill Threadgill, University of Florida student, pulled the first upset of the tournament by stopping George Herbert in a hard match, 6—3, 3—6, 7—.

Threadgill continued his success, with Rickey Willis as a partner, with a victory over Max Farrington and Commander DuBois in doubles. The score was 6—1, 6—4. However, the match which featured before rain ceased activities was the one in which Hazel Bishop defeated Eleanor Voith, 7—5, 6—8, 6—4.

It was one of those matches which is hard to lose and a grand victory for the winner. If the ladies played day in and day out, it appeared they would end with a near .500 percentage.

Weather permitting, the tourney will be continued today, at the Sixteenth Street Reservoir courts, with Barney Welsh making his first appearance at 5 o'clock. George Lee will be Barney's opponent.

Harrisonburg Hurler Near Perfect Game

Everett Fagan Gives One Hit, Faces but 28 Staunton Batters

By the Associated Press

Waynesboro, Va., Aug. 25.—Everett Fagan, of Harrisonburg, missed by one man entering the baseball hall of fame when he shut out the cellar-dwelling Staunton Presidents, 3-0, today.

The Turks also took the seven-inning nightcap, pounding three Staunton hurlers for a 7-4 verdict.

Manager John Brennan was the only President who was able to get to first base off the offerings of Fagan. For seven and two-thirds innings, the right-hander handcuffed the losers, but with two out in the eighth, Brennan knocked a pitch cleanly into centerfield.

The seven-inning nightcap was loosely played with the Presidents taking an early advantage only to see Harrisonburg pound out ten hits for seven runs and the ball game.

Center Market Nine Defeats Brooklyn Club

Visiting Navy Yard's Hurler Dealt First Setback in 11-8 Game

Disregarding the Invaders' mighty reputation, Center Market nine yesterday defeated the touring Navy Yard club of Brooklyn by an 11-8 count on the Ellipse.

The Departmental League leaders issued Brooklyn's Tony Succoso his first defeat of the season in winning, registering 11 hits behind the 7-hit hurling of Joe Wells, former Wilson High star. Wells fanned a total of 10 players and was never guilty of allowing more than two runs in an inning. Meanwhile Center Market came from behind a 7-5 score in the seventh with a 6-run barrage that settled things conclusively.

Except for poor support Wells might have held the out-of-towners to several less runs. His batterymate, Wes Taylor, pounded out a homer and Third Baseman Romington had a single, double and triple in five times at bat. Steiner and Rowles also had doubles for the winners.

Deavers allowed eight hits in the nine-inning opener, while Printz was tagged for seven safeties in the seven-inning nightcap. Bill Harris connected for two homers in the first game, leading a 13-hit attack on Frederick's Fraley.

Ineligible Hurler Costs Team Game

Though Bennings A. C. turned in a 7-to-3 victory over Sunnybrook, in a Prince Georges County Baseball League game yesterday at Magruder Park, the losers walked off the field as the winners.

Pitcher Bob Cowan, according to the league president, was ineligible for mound work with Bennings, and, as a result, the game was forfeited. Cowan had previously signed with the Shady Oak Democrats in the same league.

C.I.O. Heads Spurn Curran Fund Plea For 'Peace Front'

New York, Aug. 25 (AP).—Thirty-five leaders of 28 C. I. O. union locals refused today to support an appeal by Joseph Curran, head of the C. I. O. council in New York, for funds for a "peace mobilization meeting" in Chicago on August 31.

Murray J. Kudish, vice president of the United Retail and Wholesale Employes of America, charged that the peace front supported by Curran, president of the National Maritime Union, had been "organized by Communists, Nazis and other fifth columnists."

The 35 union officers said in a joint letter to Curran:

"We consider your telegram asking for financial aid for the so-called 'peace mobilization meeting' tantamount to a request that we give sustenance to a program which would benefit the totalitarian nations and which is in our opinion diametrically opposed to the best interests of our country and of democracy and labor throughout the world."

Mexicans Halt 2d U. S. Ship in Hunt for Almazan

Mexico City, Aug. 25.—Mexicans were reported tonight to have halted the second American merchant vessel, within one week in a supposed attempt to seize the residential candidate of the opposition, Gen. Juan Andrew Almazan, or forestall the landing of arms on Mexico's West Coast for revolutionary purposes.

Lieut. Comdr. Wallace M. Dillon, naval attache at the United States Embassy, said that he had been advised by the Mexican navy that the American oil tanker R. J. Hanna had been halted by the Mexican gunboat G-28 just before dawn today, some 75 miles northwest of Acapulco on the Pacific Coast.

Reports that the tanker had been fired upon before halting, Dillon said, were denied by the navy officials. He said, according to his advice, the ship had stopped as soon as challenged by the gunboat and had been permitted to proceed after Mexican officers had examined her papers.

It was at a nearby spot that armed forces of the Mexican navy halted and boarded the American freighter Herman Frasch last Monday, in a reported attempt to apprehend Gen. Almazan, who is "somewhere south of Mexico" on what his followers described as a "vacation." He was last reported at Panama.

Miss Marjorie Ewing, secretary, Washington independent committee for Thomas and Krueger, said the committee is receiving much support from voters who are "convinced that they cannot support the Democratic and Republican tickets because of their similar stands on war and domestic issues."

Veterinarians Convene Here Tomorrow

Nazis Used 800,000 Horses in 'Blitz,' Head of Group Finds

Hitler may have mechanized war but he has failed by far to dispense with horses, and American veterinarians will keep that in mind when they meet here this week.

Germany used more than 800,000 horses in the blitzkrieg against Belgium, Holland and France, Dr. Cassius Way, of New York City, president of the American Veterinary Medical Association, said yesterday on his arrival for the association's seventy-seventh annual convention.

"In fact," he declared, "Germany must have more horses in war service today than she has ever had before in her history."

Consequently, said Dr. Way, the 2,000 veterinarians expected at the Mayflower Hotel for the convention's official opening tomorrow will concentrate on horse diseases, as part of their contribution to national defense.

"We have in the United States Army Veterinary Corps a well equipped organization to provide treatment, evacuation and hospitalization of sick and wounded animals, if war should come," he said.

Registration, which began yesterday, will continue today, and the organization's house of representatives will meet tonight.

Committee and executive board meetings this morning will be followed by a ceremony at the Unknown Soldier's Tomb at 11 a. m. The convention will be welcomed by Commissioner John Russell Young at the first general session tomorrow morning.

Once Highest-Paid Ziegfeld Beauty Ill and Destitute

Chicago, Aug. 24 (INS).—A call for blood donors was issued tonight in behalf of Jessie Reed, once known as the highest-paid chorus girl in the world and now a destitute patient at a Chicago hospital.

JESSIE REED

Ill of a streptococcus infection, the once-famous beauty glorified by Ziegfeld, has been in the hospital dependent on anonymous blood donors since early this month.

Her physician, Dr. Kenneth Thompson, said the hospital blood bank has enough blood for only two transfusions and Miss Reed will need more in her battle for life. The blood needed is type 0 in the international classification.

Today she sat up in bed, but is unable to speak because the infection has attacked her throat.

Miss Reed became famous in the early days of Ziegfeld. In 1935, her wealth and friends gone, she was found living in a cheap room and applying for relief.

Social Worker Recommended For Tenant Court

After a month studying cases in the landlord and tenant branch of Municipal Court at the request of Judge George C. Aukam, Mrs. Florence Conlin made public yesterday a recommendation that a social worker be assigned permanently to that branch of the court.

Conducting a study of 100 cases in which tenants had difficulty meeting rents, Mrs. Conlin pointed out in her survey that the tenant branch of the court is a "focal point for many families with serious social needs."

She said in her report that the social worker is needed "not only to render case work service, but also as a liaison officer between the court, the tenant, the property owner and the social agencies in the city." Nearly 50,000 cases are handled annually in the branch.

GroundBroken For Baptist Church School

$32,000 Home Planned By East Washington Heights Organization

Mrs. Bertie M. Talbert, who attended organization of the East Washington Heights Baptist Sunday School in 1891, last night broke first ground for the new $32,000 church school building at Branch and Alabama avenues southeast.

Representatives of the Sunday school departments and others followed Mrs. Talbert in turning earth for the edifice. The ceremony took place during the rain.

Participants included Clifford H. Jenkins, Sunday school superintendent, who earlier led a procession from the church to the groundbreaking scene; Jean Smith, Marvin Lewis, Peggy Rinour, Margaret Davis and Mrs. Albert Talbert and others. The latter was present on the fourth Sunday after organization of the Sunday school.

E. Burton Corning, architect of the new building, brought greetings, and Howard Rees, secretary of the District Baptist Students Union, offered devotions.

Addressing a worship service in the church, which set the stage for the groundbreaking, Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the District of Columbia Baptist Convention, said that local Baptists were enjoying the greatest progress in their history, with many building programs under way or being mapped.

He lauded the "good vision and faith" of church workers in "building for tomorrow" through expanded Sunday school facilities.

The Rev. Glenn Faucett, pastor, spoke briefly, and joined his daughter, 11, in a vocal duet. The choir sang two anthems under the direction of Louis Strohecker. Miss Ruth Jenkins was organist.

Following the groundbreaking, the participants returned to the church auditorium, where Superintendent Jenkins gave the closing devotions.

Mother and Daughter Held In New 'Kill-for-Cash' Ring

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 25.—Discovery of a second Brooklyn murder ring was announced tonight by Kings County District Attorney William O'Dwyer with the arrest of a 40-year-old widow on a homicide charge and her daughter as a material witness.

O'Dwyer said he had evidence of "at least six murders" committed by the gang, which he described as almost as large as that borough's original "Kill-for-Cash" Syndicate.

The widow, Mrs. Rose Pantiel, known as "the Red Rose of Williamsburg," was charged by O'Dwyer with having lured Rubin (Ruby the Mock) Shapiro, a former convict, into an automobile four years ago and then directing his slaying by gang knives and guns.

The prosecutor said that she and her daughter Sylvia, 22, used their Brooklyn home as headquarters for a mob headed by Max and Meyer Ludkowitz. Max already is under arrest, charged with the murder in 1937 of Henry Halperin.

Shapiro was slain for double-crossing the ring on profits from shylocking, O'Dwyer declared, adding that a first attempt by the gang to put the finger on him resulted in the killing of Isadore Rubin, an innocent man.

Listen! with Glynn

The report comes from Bill Slocum, erstwhile scrivener of this daily item or two. Bill's been in charge of the broadcasts you heard over C. B. S., via WJSV, from the Army maneuvers in northern New York.

Well, Bill tells us by telephone, that in one of the maneuvers being held near Canton, N. Y., 600 troops were engaged along with a dozen machine guns, a half-dozen each of anti-tank guns and howitzers and a couple of 75's.

The maneuver was a complete success, he continued. As a matter of fact, there were only two casualties. And who should those be but two C. B. S. engineers, manfully giving their all in the country's defense. One was WJSV's Ed Laker. Scouting in the underbrush with his equipment. He was hit in the forehead by a low-hanging branch. Ducking too late, he practically bit off his tongue and required hospitalization. The other was Sid Bergere, of WABC. He was so intent on his broadcasting that he fell off a speeding truck. It's just like C. B. S. to keep everybody happy—including the first aid division, which wouldn't have had anything to do otherwise.

Reminder: Margaret Sullavan appears in Sinclair Lewis' "Bethel Merriday" in C. B. S.'s "Forecast" series tonight. Baritone Paul Robeson sings a new composition, "All God's Chillun," by Earl Robinson, who composed "Ballad for Americans," in the other half of the show. Comedian Eddie Green, of the "Hot Mikado," the Eva Jessye Choir and Mark Warnow's Orchestra accompany him.

Contract Bridge

Few declarers could manage the dummy better than did Mrs. Spencer Townsend, of the Poconos, on today's hand which she shared with expert Morrie Elis during a recent tournament.

The contract was five clubs, doubled, and with what finesse did Mrs. Townsend eliminate her losers by ruffing and yet capture her opponent's four trumps, including the jack.

West opened the king of spades, and declarer ducked. This was followed by the queen of spades, which was taken perforce by the ace. A low heart was led from dummy; Mrs. Townsend played small, and West won with the ten, exiting with a diamond. Declarer took the diamond ace, ruffed a spade in dummy and came back with a heart to her ace. Next she cashed the kind of diamonds and ruffed a diamond in the dummy. A heart was trumped on the return with declarer's club queen, and the fourth diamond was ruffed by dummy's club king. East was compelled to under-ruff this trick, and these were the remaining cards:

Mrs. Townsend led the ten of clubs from dummy and even though East played small, she caught his club jack on the next lead of a heart. She won her contract of five clubs doubled, losing a spade and one heart; and we doubt if the Duchess Mazarin could have played the hand any better.

Britain Unhurt By Sea Losses, Minister Says

Copyright by New York Times

London (Monday), Aug. 26.—Striking a cautious note of modest optimism in a review of the shipping situation after nearly a year of intensive attacks by U-boats, mines and airplanes, Ronald Hibbert Cross, minister of shipping, said that despite the loss of just under 1,900,000 tons of merchant shipping, Britain was about to enter the second year of war with "undiminished resources."

Against the loss of 1,900,000 tons of shipping, Cross set the addition of just over 2,000,000 gross tons of merchant shipping. That total was made up by new buildings, purchase, capture, and temporary possession of Allied and neutral merchantmen.

The net result, he added, was that Britain had enough tonnage to import all essential commodities in addition to keeping up a substantial export trade and furthermore, had already built up stocks of imported staple foodstuffs to a higher level than existed at the beginning of the war.

Germans Reopen Basel Railroad

Basel, Switzerland, Aug. 25 (AP). The Germans reopened today the Basel Railroad, frontier gateway between Switzerland and Germany, which had been closed since June 30.

At the time of the line's closing the action was reported here to have been taken in an effort to prevent information leaking out concerning German preparations to invade Britain.

Immediate significance of the reopening could not be ascertained, but it inspired reports in foreign quarters that the Germans might have deferred any invasion plans for the moment.

Nazis Close Frontier To Occupied Zones

Vichy, Aug. 25 (INS).—Thousands of French and Belgian refugees, hopefully heading back toward their homes from Southern France, were stopped by French police today and were not permitted to proceed because German authorities closed the frontier to the whole of the occupied zones.

There was no indication tonight when they would be permitted to proceed. Only one refugee railroad train was permitted to cross the frontier into the occupied zone today—a train bound for Alsace-Lorraine.

Lord North and Sister Killed by Land Mine

A Southeast Coast town in England, Aug. 25 (AP).—Lord North and his sister, Lady Cynthia Williams, were killed today and Lady North was injured in the explosion of a land mine as they walked along the seashore in a prohibited area.

German-Spain Airline Provided in New Pact

Berlin, Aug. 25 (AP).—A supplementary agreement to the air traffic treaty between Germany and Spain has been signed, DNB, official news agency, announced today. It provides for establishment of a new line.

Berlin Warns Vichy Over 'False Reports'

Berlin, Aug. 25 (AP).—(Via Radio). The German government has asked the Vichy government to desist from issuing "false reports," the official radio broadcast said today, referring to a recent communique of the French air ministry which said up to June 10 the French lost 306 planes to the Germans' 982.

"When the armistice between Germany and France was signed," the radio said, "the entire French air force had been destroyed, which fact in itself should be sufficient to disprove the veracity of the Fernch official statement."

France's Armed Forces Cut to 100,000 Men

Vichy, France, Aug. 25 (AP).—France's standing armed forces, including militarized police, have been reduced almost to the 100,000 men permitted under the armistice with Germany, military authorities reported today.

Spain to Build Plants To Make Synthetic Gas

Madrid, Aug. 25 (AP).—The Spanish government has accepted bids for construction of factories to process coal into gasoline to counter the shortage of imported gasoline.

Although the shortage has almost eliminated private consumption of gasoline, the government is said to have quantities in store for its own potential needs.

French Troops to Aid British Against Italy

Somewhere in the Suez Canal Zone, Aug. 25 (AP).—Free French soldiers—men who have fled France's colonies to join Britain's Mediterranean war against Italy after the military collapse of France—formally became a part of the British army in the Middle East today.

The trained, fully equipped troops, wearing British uniforms but French insignia, received their regimental colors on a green parade ground.

Italy Lets Prisoners Talk Over Radio

Rome, Aug. 25 (AP).—Italy took a tip from German propaganda tonight and permitted two British war prisoners to talk over the radio so that their families and friends in England could hear.

The men said they were from the Submarine Odin, the loss of which was announced by the British August 10.

South Sea Raider Hints Nazi Return to World War Tactics

By Edward E. Bomar.
Associated Press Staff Writer

The appearance of a Nazi sea raider in the South Pacific hints resumption of this colorful phase of naval warfare on a more extensive scale.

With the British fleet occupied in home waters and Mediterranean and in escorting convoys, Germany is in such an advantageous position to harass commerce far and wide that it is slightly puzzling that the opportunity has not been used to a greater extent.

The explanation accepted by naval men is that the Nazis have subordinated everything for the time to the attempt to conquer England. If they fail before the onset of autumn weather, Britain's foes may be expected to turn to high sea raiders and all other means to tighten the "total blockade."

The prospect must be inviting to daring spirits in the idle German navy. Cruisers and armed merchantmen, as well as U-boats, may now be sent around Scotland into the Atlantic from Norwegian ports with far less risk of encountering enemy warships than when they were active last fall and winter.

In the World War, the raiders had to steal out in thick weather and in disguise, through a tight Allied blockade, yet they managed to sink more than 60 vessels on the high seas.

It is the necessity imposed on Britain of diverting cruisers and other warships into the chase and of reinforcing convoy guards that is the principal value of such warfare in German eyes. Actual destruction of shipping is more inviting near England itself, where Berlin claims more than 100,000 tons was sunk last week by torpedoes and bombs.

How quickly the British admiralty is to react to any challenge by enemy surface ships is attested by the destruction of the Admiral Graf Spee off Montevideo last winter, the north Atlantic naval battle in which the British armed liner, Rawalpindi, was lost, and the attempt of the merchant cruiser, Alcantra, to sink a raider off Brazil last month.

The raider reported to have sunk the 8,706-ton steamer Turakina in New Zealand waters the past week may be the same which the Alcantra failed to put out of action more than 6,000 miles away on July 31. If so, the Nazi craft must have been stealthily refueled and given supplies in the meantime, in the manner of the World War raiders.

Last of British Troops Quit China

Shanghai, Aug. 25. (AP)—Six hundred Seaforth Highlanders left Shanghai today, en route to Singapore, it was reported, completing withdrawal of British armed forces from Chinese soil except for a few soldiers left behind to supervise shipment of equipment.

Several British vessels postponed sailing for Haiphong, French Indo-China, because of persistent Shanghai rumors of a Japanese navel concentration off Indo-China waters.

One dispatch from Hanoi said there was no unusual Japanese activity along the Indo-Chinese shores and also denied Chinese reports that 30 French war vessels had gathered at Haiphong, prepared to resist possible Japanese attack.

U. S. Industry Can Beat Dictatorship, Says Hillman

National Defense Board's Labor Mobilizer Pleased at Unity Between Employer and Worker; Now Busy Placing Skilled Men

By Cecil B. Dickson.
International News Service Staff Writer

By cooperation already attained on the national defense program, American labor and industry will match and surpass, through democratic processes, what totalitarian governments are trying to accomplish through compulsion. And the United States will win.

These were declarations Sidney Hillman, labor mobilizer member of President Roosevelt's National Defense Commission, made yesterday in an interview.

"There is an atmosphere of unity between industry and labor on the national defense program that has exceeded expectations," Hillman said. We had no strikes of consequence on national defense and have worked out settlements where strikes were threatened. We have been able to obtain agreements on jurisdictional disputes between the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor, and the workers of the different unions are working in peace and harmony, side by side."

Hillman's job is to find skilled workers for the thousands of new jobs being created by the $15,000,000,000 armament program, which, he said, probably will not be completed in four or five years, dependent, of course, on whether this country remains at peace or goes to war.

Hillman, 53-year-old president and founder of th Amalgamated Clothing Workers and vice president of the C. I. O., got off to a bad start on the Defense Commission when it was reported that he was to head the Government's conscription plan, but now he is regarded by his associates as the ace of the organization.

"It was a mistake made in the announcement by Steve Early (Presidential secretary) at the White House," Hillman said. "President Roosevelt never asked me to handle the conscription plan. The only thing I'm supposed to do is to get the people between 18 and 64 registered, if Congress gives the authority, to find what work they are best fitted for in the national defense program."

Asked what he thought about communism, naziism and fascism, Hillman replied:

"I'm against all isms, except Americanism. You can look up my record and see that in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers we have driven out and kept out all the Communists and other agitators, from Bill Haywood on down."

Regardless of whether Congress authorizes the registration of workers between 18 and 64 for mobilization of labor for industry, Hillman has set in motion machinery to get an inventory of labor.

"The labor unions and industry are cooperating," he said. "Labor unions are furnishing lists of their workers, many of whom are skilled workers in trades other than the ones they are following. Industry is doing likewise.

"We have located between 4,000 and 5,000 expert toolmakers, who now are performing routine mass production jobs in the automobile plants. Already some of these have been sent to Army and Navy arsenals and to plants making tools for munitions."

Thus far, according to Hillman, 6,000,000 unemployed workers have been registered through the United States Employment Service and he thinks there are about 2,000,000 more.

"The first thing we are trying to do is to place the idle in jobs they are fitted for," Hillman said. "Thus far, there is little shortage of skilled labor except in certain areas and we are shifting the qualified workers to those areas. The number of workers we are absorbing from the WPA is remarkable."

Hillman now is seeking to induce industry to hire older workers. Already he had prevailed upon the Navy to increase from 45 to 62 the age limit on hiring workers.

"We cant let 70 per cent of our effectives go to waste," he said. "Industry is learning that older skilled workers are as good producers as less skilled younger workers."

A firm believer in settling labor disputes without resort to strikes, Hillman said strikes are costly to both the workers and to employers.

"Strikes cannot be appraised in lost working days and losses to employers," he said. "Unsettled minds in industry, uneasiness and apprehension, lead to less production. This creates opportunities for professional agitators. Cooperation between labor and industry is the solution. Labor must be reasonable in its demands and industry must be reasonable in meeting them."

Hillman said one of the goals of his division was to further improve conditions that will prevent the infiltration of Fifth Columnists, Communists and Nazis in industry.

"Danger from these groups comes when they are permitted to take advantage of situations," he said. "When bad situations are found we should correct them at once. I don't want to minimize the danger, but we must uphold the gains of labor to effectively prevent their interference with our program.

"After all," he said, "Free labor can thrive only in a free country. No worker can be loyal to his union, if he is disloyal to our country. Real efficiency comes with real democracy.

"The cooperation we have had from labor and industry will match and exceed, through our democratic processes, what Hitler and the totalitarian governments are trying to do by compulsion. And we will win because our spirit is united in a national effort far beyond our expectations."
